Members of Both Houses Demand Restoration of Independent CAA

The Nation's recent wave of airline disaster—topped yesterday with the death of Representative William D. Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, and six others in a crash near Atlanta—will be subjected to a Senate investigation, Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, promised last night.

Clark told the Senate that a special Commerce Subcommittee, created last fall after the death of Senator Ernest Lundeen in an airliner crash at Lovettsville, Va., would swing into action after the chamber has disposed of the aid to Britain bill.

House Probe Also Urged

Clark, chairman of the subcommittee, made his announcement after yesterday's crash of an Eastern Air Lines sleeper plane brought a storm of Congressional protest against "confusion" in Federal air regulations.

On the other side of the Capitol, Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, demanded a House investigation of the crash. At the same time, Bender joined clamor in House and Senate for restoration of independence of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Since the authority was placed under the Commerce Department, Bender declared, "we have had one major catastrophe after another."

Bender was supported by Representative Hinshaw (Republican), of California, who called for enactment of his resolution to create a special House committee to investigate air crashes. Hinshaw asked Chairman Sabath of the House Rules Committee for an early hearing on the proposal.

Called "Legalized Murder"

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, called the Atlanta crash "legalized murder." He blamed last year's reorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority by which the authority lost its independence and became a subsidiary of the Commerce Department.

McCarran, sponsor of the original civil aeronautics law, said that there had been no fatal accidents for 17 months while the Civil Aeronautics Authority functioned independently. He cited five air disasters since President Roosevelt transferred the authority to Commerce.

"As long as there is confusion and chaos in aeronautics regulation," he said, "just so long will such accidents continue. This is legalized murder and it should be stopped."

The old civil aeronautics set-up, the reorganization of which McCarran fought, was comprised of three agencies, all independent and all responsible to the President. One of these was the Air Safety Board which was charged with investigation of all accidents, determination of their causes and recommendation of remedies.

The old Civil Aeronautics Authority was responsible, exclusively, for enactment of the safety board's recommendations into safety regulations and for enforcement of those regulations.

5-Man Investigating Unit

The third agency was the old Civil Aeronautics Administration, which was charged with general administration of the civil air laws and directed the Government's force of airway inspectors.

Since the reorganization, investigation of accidents and enactment of safety regulations has been in the hands of a five-man Civil Aeronautics Board, four of whom were members of the old Civil Aeronautics Authority. The authority, offi-

Seven Missing as U. S. Bomber Plunges Into Panama Bay

Army Plane Burns After Crashing; Searchers Fail to Find Any of Crew

By the Associated Press

Balboa, Canal Zone, Feb. 27.—A U. S. Army B-18 bomber crashed into Panama Bay and burned late today, and an immediate search failed to disclose a trace of its seven-man crew.

Witnesses said two men leaped with parachutes, but searching parties, using flares, were unable to find any survivors tonight. The bomber burst into flames when it hit the water.

Army authorities said the plane, with three officers and four enlisted men aboard, was last reported at 6:30 p. m. It belonged to the Ninety-ninth Squadron stationed at Rio Hato.

Names of the missing men were not promptly available.

Called Best of Type

Balboa, Feb. 27 (INS).—The B-18 twin-motored bomber, which crashed tonight on Panama Bay, is said to be one of the best of its type yet developed.

Members of an Army commission, now investigating the possibility of sabotage in four recent Canal Zone plane crashes, were believed en route to the scene.

Chase Ends in Tragedy

Crazed Clerk Shoots Man, Kills Self in Climax to Gun Battle

Woman Tells Police Victim Threatened Her and Husband in Jealous Rage

Arrested for a minor traffic violation, a Washington grocery clerk killed himself yesterday afternoon after attempting to escape in a running gun battle with police through crowded downtown streets. A bystander who attempted to halt the fleeing man was shot and seriously wounded.

Not until after the double shooting did police learn that the fugitive had threatened earlier in the day to kill the girl friend who left him, her husband, and himself—a threat that set off the tragic train of events—and was waiting to carry out his threat when taken into custody for illegal parking.

Police said that Murphy H. Hubbs, 36, of 1328 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, shot himself through the right temple when cornered on a parking lot in the 700 block of Eleventh Street Northwest.

John E. Francis, 20, of Colonial Village, Arlington, Va., an employe at the Greyhound bus terminal here, was shot and severely wounded, according to police, when he grappled with Hubbs.

It was at first believed that Hubbs was slain by Traffic Patrolman Lawrence A. Buscher, who fired once from his .38-caliber police pistol at the fugitive, after Hubbs, according to witnesses, had blazed away at his pursuer. However, the bullet extracted from the body was from a .32-caliber revolver, the size used by Hubbs in his mad dash for freedom.

Shortly after 5 p. m. police received an anonymous call from a woman that she had been molested by a man in front of 1208 G Street Northwest.

His Story Suspicious

In a routine response to the call, Cruiser Car Patrolmen William J. Gaylor and H. S. Childress were sent to the scene but saw no woman being molested. However, they found Hubbs standing beside his parked car in an illegal parking zone.

Questioned by Gaylor, according to police, Hubbs replied "I'm waiting for my wife." But when Hubbs was unable to explain where his wife was—police later learned she was ill and living in Knoxville, Tenn.—Gaylor ordered him to drive to the First Precinct station on account of the illegal parking.

"I didn't like the way he was driving," Gaylor said, "and at Thirteenth and H I told him to stop and move over."

Doctor Tells Court Why He Quit GHA

Prevented Him From Practicing Properly, Dr. Hulburt Testifies

By Gerald G. Gross.
Post Staff Writer

While testifying for the prosecution, a Washington physician scored a possibly significant point for the defense yesterday when he told the doctors' trial jury he quit the staff of Group Health Association because conditions were such that he could not practice his profession properly.

Dr. R. Stephen Hulburt made the admission under crossexamination by William E. Leahy, counsel for the American Medical Association and its members who are being tried in District Court on Sherman Act violation charges.

Following Dr. Hulburt's soft but firm "Yes" to Leahy's question, Government counsel attempted to have the witness amplify his reply, but was shut off by a barrage of sustained objections.

Became G. H. A. Physician

The physician's late afternoon appearance on the stand highlighted a day devoted mainly to the submission of further evidence intended to prove that Washington hospitals conspired with the District Medical Society to hinder G. H. A.

A member of the Georgetown University medical faculty from 1932 to 1937, his courtesy privileges at the university hospital were withdrawn after he became a G. H. A. staff physician in the latter year, Dr. Tulburt testified.

Asked by Grant W. Kelleher, of prosecution counsel, if that disciplinary measure did not influence him to resign from the Federal workers' medical cooperative, the witness answered in the negative.

"It did carry influence with my

Steel Strike Peace Near, OPM Believes

Knudsen, Hillman Release Statement Of Terms in Labor War at Buffalo

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Immediate termination of the day-old strike at the Lackawanna, N. Y., plant of Bethlehem Steel Co. was seen as probable under terms of an agreement proposed and publicly announced last night by William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, directors of the Office of Production Management.

It was believed that the two top defense executives, who conferred constantly yesterday with both parties in the dispute, would not have announced their proposal unless they had been reasonably certain of its acceptance.

Points of Settlement

The OPM's proposal, which Hillman and Knudsen jointly made public at a suddenly-assembled press conference at 10 o'clock last night, calls for:

1. The company to reinstate all workers who struck or who have been laid off in the past few days;

2. Company officials to meet immediately in conference with leaders of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which called the strike at 9 p. m. Wednesday, to adjust misunderstandings and grievances, and

3. The OPM to "explore" with the National Labor Relations Board the possibility of an election in the Lackawanna plant to determine the collective bargaining agency.

At Buffalo, Van A. Bittner, S. W. O. C. regional director, said that with "clarification of Section 1" as to time when the men would be rehired, the union would accept the plan.

Hillman 'Hopeful'

Hillman added that he was hopeful that the strike would be terminated "tomorrow or the day after at the latest."

Both the public announcement of the proposed truce and the late-hour press conference were unprecedented in the history of the defense program. Although the OPM proposed a settlement for the Allis-Chalmers strike in Milwaukee, it carefully guarded the terms.

The announcement followed conferences yesterday between Knudsen, Edwin D. Bransome and C. S. Ching, industrialists on the OPM mediation staff, and J. M. Larkin, Bethlehem vice president in charge of industrial relations, and H. A. Moore, general counsel of the company. At the same time, Hillman, John R. Owens and other labor members of his staff conferred by phone with Philip Murray, C. I. O. president and S. W. O. C. chairman, and S. W. O. C. chairman, and Bittner, S. W. O. C. regional director.

In threatening the strike, Bittner had declared that the S. W. O. C. demands included immediate reinstatement of about 1,000 Lackawanna workers allegedly dismissed or suspended in the past week; consent by the company to a NLRB-supervised election to determine a collective bargaining agent, and compliance by the company with a

Opposition Gains Spur Aid Bill Drive

Administration Forces Again Take Offensive, Predict 2-to-1 Passage

Gallup Poll reveals slight recession in public support of lease-lend bill. Page 7.

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Concerned over gradual opposition gains, Senate Administration forces yesterday again took the offensive in an effort to beat down a solid week of "war bill" charges aimed at the lend-lease resolution.

Two speakers for the bill were sent into the debate against one opponent. Despite a growing and vociferous minority against the bill, leaders insisted the ratio of 2-to-1 for passage will be maintained in the final vote.

In addition to the set speeches, managers of the bill repeatedly tangled with opponents for the second successive day in a series of side bouts. Each time it was on a denial of war charges. Leadership spokesmen restated their case that the bill is the one hope of peace.

Tentatively, the expected date of passage was moved up to Saturday, March 8. A leadership agreement was informally reached with opposition spokesmen to move up the Senate's meeting hour to 11 a. m., beginning Monday, in an effort to speed action on amendments.

Deny Filibuster Intent

Denying any filibuster was intended, opposition leaders pointed to the increasing participation of supporters of the bill in debate as an argument for more time.

Accepting the morning hour meeting arrangement, they nonetheless announced flatly they would enter no agreement to limit debate.

To the opposition show of Senate gains, leaders replied this will not materially affect the passage ballot. One Administration source canvassing the final vote chances yesterday raised his opposition count from 25 to 30. A majority is already committed to the bill.

Managers of the bill reiterated their determination to oppose any further material changes in the bill, aside from their pledge to strengthen Congressional control over future arms outlays and promised noncontroversial concessions.

In the trio of prepared speeches yesterday, Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, said the bill will strengthen United States defenses and "may save us from war." Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, declared the bill the best weapon at hand to avoid involvement.

Lone scheduled opposition speaker was Senator Chavez (Democrat), of

Police Spring Trap, Seize Confessed 'Paper-Bag Bandit'

A gunman who confessed to being the "paper bag bandit" last night was caught in a police trap after successfully executing a series of holdups over the last six months.

The suspect, a 26-year-old white man, allegedly attempted to hold up Ruth Green, a clerk, in the High's ice cream store at 1213 Fourth Street Southwest, only to be confronted by two policemen, Privates H. M. Jewell and L. Halstead, hiding in a back room. The bandit's pistol proved to be a toy.

Police said that the intruder admitted he had robbed many stores, particularly High's, producing a gun from a paper bag, which he later used to carry out the store's cash.

Defense Housing Plans Mapped

The fight for space to house new Federal employes being brought here at the rate of 100 daily last night produced the following developments:

War Department has requested the Budget Bureau for funds to construct a huge temporary office building either here or in nearby Virginia.

The Budget Bureau is studying a plan that may lead to the transfer of several Federal bureaus out of Washington. President Roosevest is understood to have ordered the inquiry.

The President has taken an interest in the space problem and is reported to be irked over the delays in constructing Federal office buildings.

Indo-China Gets Japanese Ultimatum

Force Threatened Unless Thai Border Proposal Is Accepted

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Feb. 27.—The Japanese have delivered an ultimatum to French Indo-China, reliable sources said tonight, demanding that she yield by Friday midnight to Japan's final proposal for settlement of the border war with Thailand or suffer "forceful action."

(The expiration hour is 10 a. m., Friday, E.S.T.).

What the Japanese meant by "forceful action to win justice for Thailand" was not disclosed, but it was understood that the foreign office had notified both the colonial administration and the Vichy government that unless a favorable reply is forthcoming the matter would be put in the hands of Japanese military officers already in Indo-China.

Competent sources said the foreign office would accept no alteration of the mediation proposal—reported by the Japanese press to call for cession to Thailand of large sections of Laos and Cambodia—and would extend the deadline only if convinced the French were not "playing for time."

The Japanese press has widely blamed Britain and the United States for Indo-China's reluctance to yield. One set of proposals already has been rejected by Vichy.

Bombers Blast 16 Freighters, Nazis Claim

9 Declared Sunk Outright 300 Miles West of Ireland

By Percival Knauth
Copyright, 1941, New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 27.—The German air force, according to reports received here, struck another blow at British shipping yesterday 300 miles west of Ireland over the open Atlantic waters.

Sixteen British ships totaling 102,000 tons are said to have been sunk or seriously damaged in the course of a single attack by German long-range bombers.

Nine ships totaling 58,000 tons were sunk outright, the Germans claim. Three more were damaged so badly that "their loss must be reckoned with." Four others received "serious hits" which, it is inferred, disabled them at least temporarily.

The German air force today, according to a later report, sank or damaged another 23,500 tons of British shipping in attacks ranging from the southeast coast of Britain as far as the Firth of Forth in Scotland.

A vessel of 10,000 tons is reported to have been so badly damaged that its loss appears certain. Another 4,000-ton vessel in the Firth of Forth was hit directly by several bombs. Off Great Yarmouth a 4,500-ton merchantman was hit directly amid-

U. S. Gets Nazis to Release American Boy to Parents Here

German-Speaking Child's First Request Is for a Hot Dog

A dark-eyed and glowing-faced American boy and the father who sent him to Germany in infancy were together again in Washington last night after more than seven years of separation.

The young citizen is Herman Edward Gottschalk, 7, who arrived yesterday in New York Harbor. His father is Herman Gottschalk, 45, of 1846 C Street Southeast, a U. S. Navy Yard machinist of seven years' experience.

The child, who speaks only German and says "Das Aeroplane" in a warning tone when aircraft pass overhead, was sent to his father's homeland after the boy's mother died and his father was unable to provide for him. He returned to the United States yesterday after 1½ years' combined effort by the State Department, the Red Cross and his father.

With the elder Gottschalk as interpreter, the young boy last night answered queries in guarded tones. He said that he had been taught in school to be "quiet and not talk much."

Russian About-Face

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Feb. 27.—Russia was reported tonight to have done an about-face and raised strong objections to a German thrust through Bulgaria to Greece, leading to a speed-up of military preparations by Yugoslavia, the country which might offer a second-choice pathway to the Nazis.

This turn of events, plus a threatened British diplomatic break with Bulgaria, and British-Turkish negotiations in which the two nations were said to have reached "full agreement" on Balkan and eastern Mediterranean problems, brought a sudden rise in the already high Balkan tension.

Diplomatic advices reaching Bucharest said Yugoslavia began calling up reservists on individual orders.

Yugoslav Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovic suddenly returned without explanation to Belgrade after taking part in ratification of a Yugoslav-Hungarian friendship pact at Budapest.

The reported change of attitude by Russia, heretofore represented as acquiescent to German transit through Bulgaria, was said to have increased fears in Belgrade that Adolf Hitler now might attempt to sweep down Yugoslavia's Vardar Valley to Salonika instead of taking the mountainous way through Bulgaria.

Adding to southeastern Europe's war of nerves was a report that Bulgaria may join the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis as a result of last night's secret cabinet meeting in Sofia.

That meeting followed a long conference among Baron Herbert von Richthofen, German Minister to Sofia, and Bulgarian leaders.

Bulgarian adherence to the Axis alliance, it was believed in diplomatic quarters, might turn the Nazi armies toward Yugoslavia, although Bulgarian air bases would be used.

Another theory advanced was that Hitler could get to Greece much quicker down the Vardar Valley—historic road of conquest—than through Bulgaria.

Commons Vote Of Confidence Is Unanimous

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 27.—Winston Churchill challenged his Commons opponents today with a demand for a vote of confidence and the House responded with a resounding unanimous "yes."

It was the first time the British prime minister had made such a demand since his government, then just formed amid the German invasion of the Low Countries, received a 381-to-0 confidence vote on May 13.

In the same session Churchill, declaring impatiently that "I really must emphasize that there is a war on," turned down a request for a debate on the leasing of Western Hemisphere bases to the United States, an issue on which there has been some persistent if faint British grumbling.

MacDonald and Cripps Affected

The matter of confidence was on a comparatively minor piece of legislation, a bill which will permit members of Commons who are sent to posts abroad for "the duration" to retain their Parliamentary seats. Affected especially is Malcolm MacDonald, the new high commissioner to Canada, and in lesser measure the Ambassador to Madrid and Moscow, Sir Samuel Hoare and Sir Stafford Cripps, respectively.

Opponents of the bill contended this would deprive the envoys' constituencies of proper representation, but Churchill declared brusquely:

"A great inconvenience will arise to the war effort of this country" if the bill is not adopted.

There were murmurs of "no, no," and one independent member asked that Churchill explain why MacDonald should be "any more able to help win the war in his new position by retaining his seat in Commons."

Churchill replied:

"At this time, when we are fighting for our lives, it is in the interest of the country that the government should have full freedom—as long as it retains the confidence of the house—to make the appointments it desires."

"A Roll of Honor"

MacDonald, he went on, will be serving the country abroad in the same way that members of Commons who are in the fighting services are serving it at home.

Dramatically, he waved aloft a white paper listing 166 House of Commons members in the army, navy and R. A. F. and declared:

"This is a roll of honor!"

ships and set afire. Another 2,000-ton vessel was hit on the after-deck and it is reported to have burned out. Off Harwich a 3,000-ton freighter was dive-bombed and hit so badly that it stopped with a heavy list.

The last big attack of German long-range bombers on British convoys was reported ten days ago when nine ships were reported to have been bombed, six of them having been hit so seriously that they either sank immediately or were burned out.

All the ships attacked yesterday, it is stated here, were fully loaded and bound for Britain. Their average displacement is estimated at between 6,000 and 8,000 tons.

Yesterday's attack will bring the sunken tonnage reported for the month of February to an impressive total. For the week's total from February 10 to 16 alone is estimated by the Germans at 176,000 tons, to which must be added yesterday's sunken tonnage and that sunk earlier in the month.

Indo-China Gets Tokyo Ultimatum

Indo-China came reports of a major diplomatic move by Japan which would take her foreign minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, to one or, more of the world's pivotal capitals. Moscow, Hankow, Berlin and Rome were mentioned as possible visiting places.

It was suggested that a visit to Hankow might mean an effort at peace with China, and a visit to Moscow an attempt to speed diplomatic and commercial negotiations with the Russians.

Other developments were:

1. The admiralty announced appointment of Vice Admiral Hiroki Yamamoto as commander of the Mako naval base in the Pescadores Islands, a cluster lying 30 miles west of Kormosa, off the east China coast. These islands are about 250 miles north of the Philippines.

2. Press dispatches from Bangkok said that because of "the large number of Japanese in Thailand," steps are under way to open consulates at Singora and Songkhala, both in Southern Thailand, where heavily armed British Malaya is the neighbor.

3. Domei, Japanese news agency, reported that a number of Japanese "travelers" already had departed from Saigon, southern French Indo-China, for Haiphong, northern port, where two Japanese commercial steamers are berthed, ready to remove civilian Japanese from the French colony.

The Japanese government previously had ordered Japanese residents of the colony to be prepared to depart—a pressure strategy first used on Indo-China last September, when Japan was bargaining for military bases in the north of the colony.

Vichy Takes Firm Stand

Vichy, Feb. 27 (AP).—The French government appeared tonight to have taken a strong attitude toward the border dispute between French Indo-China and Thailand, and was reported massing troops on the Indo-Chinese frontier ready to resume hostilities.

This position was taken in the face of reports here that Thailand, which had originally demanded nearly a third of Indo-China, had now modified her demands and that these, in their later form, had full Japanese support.

The French have offered only a small concession around Bassac, a region on the right bank of the Mekong River, and, it was stated, were unwilling to yield further.

Shift of Jews From Vienna In Final Phase

Copyright by New York Times

Vienna, Feb. 19 (Delayed).—Large scale transfer of Jews to Poland from Vienna appeared today to have entered its final phase. This forenoon the second trainload within a week left the city for "an unknown destination," which, it is reliably reported, is the Lublin district of former Poland, now officially designated as the central government.

By autumn Vienna is expected to occupy a position unique throughout the world, namely that of the only Jewless large city on earth. The first "Jew special" of the present phase of the general plan ultimately to make all the Third Reich a Jewless land, left Vienna last Friday carrying approximately 960.

On arrival the majority found their new homes much more comfortable than they expected, according to telegrams received by relatives and friends some of whom are under "prepare for departure" orders.

50,000 Still to Go

The second train today carried almost 1,100. Others apparently are to follow at a rate of 10 to 12 trains monthly until the 50,000 to 60,000 still in Vienna are transferred.

Many Jews here consider the Jews all over Europe to be more or less hostages against America's entry into the war. Some fear that even an appreciable amount of help from England and America may precipitate whatever plan the Fuehrer had in mind when, in recent speeches, he spoke of the elimination of Jews from Europe under certain circumstances.

The present evacuation is the third phase of the general transfer scheme. A year ago approximately 10,000 Poland-born Jewish residents of Vienna were "repatriated" to their birthplace. Last autumn a few thousand more who had relatives in Poland, were transferred, and others followed. The program was interrupted apparently because insufficient accommodations were ready.

Luggage Limited

As baggage the transferees are permitted to take little more than the average of what they or their ancestors, in the opinion of the authorities, brought with them when they immigrated to the former Austria. Each transferee receives written instructions that a maximum of two pieces of luggage totaling 100 kilograms can be taken along and suggesting how many pairs of shoes, stockings, blankets, waterjugs, knives and forks, etc. should be included.

The Jews must leave their homes in Vienna as they stand. The doors must be locked and sealed and the keys delivered to the authorities. Those who desire can appoint trustees to liquidate their property. Otherwise, apparently the Jewish community headquarters do so under official surveillance.

Italians Yield By Thousands, British Report

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Feb. 27.—A British column has driven down the Red Sea coast in Eritrea for 200 miles and captured Kelamet, 30 miles northeast of Cheren, in an effort to take that key Italian defense point from the rear, British dispatches said today.

Troops which had fought to Cubcub, some 40 miles northeast of Cheren, sent roving detachments back to the north to occupy Kelamet and also Nafka, 60 miles north of Cheren, it was reported. At neither place was resistance encountered.

The tactics indicated a rapid encirclement of Cheren, heavily fortified railway station which has been attacked from the west for weeks by British attempting to reach Asmara, Eritrean capital.

On the Somaliland front, meanwhile, the Italians were reported "demoralized" and surrendering by thousands throughout the huge sandy area that has been overrun by south and west African forces.

Bardera, Italian headquarters on the upper Juba River in Somaliland, was reported by air scouts to be deserted.

The British partially confirmed Italian and German reports of a clash between German and British armored detachments in Libya.

The British said "armored fighting vehicles believed to be German" were driven back when encountered west of El Agheila.

(Germans and Italians said British tanks were destroyed and prisoners taken in a clash Monday southeast of Agedabia. El Agheila is about 70 miles southwest of Agebadia. Both are south of Bengasi.)

The R. A. F. reported a hit on a railway bridge at Awash on the Djibouti line near Addis Ababa in Ethiopia, and acknowledged damage to "R. A. F. property" in a mass raid at Luga airdrome on the island of Malta.

Russia Believed Objecting to Nazi Push Into Bulgaria

try "by hundreds—No, I should say thousands."

In an interview, he raised the possibility of an imminent break in British-Bulgarian relations followed by British bombing of both Bulgaria and Rumania, and declared:

"In one day, 350 Germans crossed from northern to southern Dobruja." (Northern Dobruja is in Rumania, where the Nazi troops stand at an estimated 620,000; southern Dobruja is now a part of Bulgaria.)

Referring to Britain's long delay in breaking off relations with Rumania, he added:

"The Rumanian experiment will not be repeated here."

Aside from the already reported theft of code books from the consulate safe in Sofia Saturday night, Rendel said, an unsuccessful attempt had been made to steal valuable papers from the consulate at Burgas, on the Black Sea.

Despite a protest to the Bulgarian government over the Grenovitch incident, he added, the British had been given no satisfaction.

This case, the minister went on, was more serious than the arrest and beating of British oilmen in Rumania reported shortly before London broke off with Bucharest.

He announced if diplomatic relations are broken "it is very probable that Britain will declare war on Bulgaria before hostile acts are committed."

Implies Raids on Rumania

"But," he added, "we would regard ourselves as free to attack the Germans on Bulgarian soil without any formal declaration."

"If we leave here, Bulgaria will have to face the consequences of being a theater of war. Adequate causes for breaking relations almost exist already."

The minister explained that Rumania had not as yet been bombed "because we want to make it easier for Bulgaria to remain neutral." He implied, though, that bombing attacks upon the Rumanian oil fields and communication lines would quickly follow any break in British-Bulgarian relations.

Bulgaria, he said, has "met Germany more than half way," adding:

"Many Germans are here in key positions.

"Press An Enemy"

"Technicians have crossed the Danube to supervise bridge moorings. Extra telephone wires have been strung across the country. Villas already have been requisitioned for the German general staff.

"The Bulgarian army has been virtually mobilized, but it is not facing the German army on the Danube.

"The Bulgarian press is an enemy of Britain and completely in German hands.

"The police are very largely under German control. The army also is largely in German hands, at least at the top.

"The schools have been closed for the use of troops. Motor trucks have been requisitioned as well as livestock and even peasant carts."

Britain and Turkey In 'Full Agreement'

Ankara, Feb. 27 (AP).—Britain and Turkey reached "full agreement on all points" today concerning the Balkans and the Eastern Mediterranean, a British spokesman announced, and observers expected a discussion of the relations of Turkey and Russia to follow.

Even while British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Turkish leaders wound up their conferences, Sir Stafford Cripps, British ambassador to Russia, was on his way here from Moscow. He will arrive in Ankara tomorrow.

In announcing the quick British-Turkish agreement, Eden's secretary declared that today's conferences were so successful that further joint diplomatic and political conversations were unnecessary.

Military experts of the two countries will continue their talks on "technical details."

DutchRiot Laid ToParachuting British Agents

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Feb. 27.—British agents landed by parachutes or speedboats at night may be partly responsible, German spokesmen hinted today, for strikes and fatal clashes in the Netherlands.

"Local" uprisings, which resulted in the death of at least six persons and injuries to several more yesterday, have been suppressed by swift, decisive measures, informed persons said.

Dispatches from Amsterdam said all strikers returned to work under military orders threatening 15 years' imprisonment and even death in cases of disruption of war-vital industry.

The orders were reported yesterday to apply only to the province of North Holland, including Amsterdam, but today German spokesmen mentioned Rotterdam also as a place of martial action.

All was declared to be quiet after yesterday's roundup of a "great number" of "ringleaders of nightly attacks" and of a "secret Jewish organization."

Referring to "agents working in English service," an official spokesman said "there is no preventing parachutists from landing and some boats might reach the coast. But no big vessel with upwards of 1,000 agents could land. We see to that."

He admitted that the Lowlands are a "fertile ground for agitators" because occupation by a foreign power, whether "by God or devil," would arouse "resentment" in some quarters, but said the situation "cannot possibly cause any serious trouble."

Army Calls 7 More State Road Workers

Richmond, Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—The State highway department, reporting the loss of seven more employes, said today approximately 50 of its men had been called into military service or defense work since December.

Byron Killed In Air Crash Fatal to Seven

Eddie Rickenbacker Among Nine Hurt in Crackup Near Atlanta

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Feb. 27.—On the beam, on course but too low, a sky sleeper careened into a pine woodland near here early today, killing Representative William D. Byron, of Williamsport, Md., and six other persons and injuring nine, including Airman Eddie Rickenbacker.

The deaths of the Congressman, the crew of three and three passengers brought to more than 50 the number of lives lost in air line wrecks in recent months.

Eastern Air Lines' sleek, almost new $120,000 air beauty rumbled in at 1,800 feet altitude over mist-shrouded Atlanta airport at 12:44 a. m. (E. S. T.) on schedule for the run from New York and with her two big engines throbbing steadily.

The ceiling was only 300 feet, but Pilot James E. Perry reported "on the beam" and the ship swung away on the radio beam it was supposed to follow out and back to safety, while some of its 13 passengers still slept in their de luxe berths.

No more was heard from the plane's radio, and minutes later, its air room strangely sunk to 50 feet, it clipped off the top of a tree beside a farm field 5 miles southeast of the airport.

In the next few tragic seconds it wheeled crazily into the woods, slicing off trees up to a foot in diameter, caroming off a knoll and coming to a stop on its back, a grostesque pile of glistening scrap metal.

While the surviving passengers huddled shivering beside the hulk, trying futilely to ward off horror by talk and jokes, some of their companions died moaning in the wreckage, imprisoned by crumpled metal and beyond the help of the injured and shocked survivors.

Rescue crews didn't find the wreckage until about dawn after Jesse Rosenfeld, of New Orleans, and N. Hansell, of the Bronx, both passengers, made their painful way to farm homes and then to telephones, the latter being guided by a dog.

Still pinned in the cabin when rescuers clambered into the broken hull was Rickenbacker, No. 1 American ace pilot in the World War and present president of E. A. L.

Rickenbacker Shouts Warnings

Left hip broken, several ribs smashed, head gashed, he still was conscious, had been shouting warnings to shivering passengers outside to strike no matches lest the gasoline-soaked wreckage be wrapped in fire avoided on impact by the pilot's last-minute turning off of ignition switches.

Taken to Piedmont Hospital, he was given slightly better than an even chance. His wife drove to Atlanta over slippery highways from Charlotte, N. C., where she had been visiting.

Rickenbacker's hip fracture, Mrs. Rickenbacker said, was a break of an old injury he received in auto racing days.

Also listed as seriously hurt at Piedmont was H. A. Littledale, assistant managing editor of the New York Times, who was en route from his Short Hills, N. J., home to Mexico for a vacation. Mrs. Littledale, who is editor of Parents' Magazine, also was in serious condition at Crawford Long Hospital.

Pinned Under a Tree

Dead with Byron and Capt. Perry were Copilot L. E. Thomas, Steward Clarence Moore, both of New York; A. Leibowitz, Atlanta; Juan Maria, San Salvador; B. C. M. Van der Hoop, of Scarsdale, N. Y., vice president of the Tin Processing Corporation of New York.

Airline attendants were unable to explain why the big Douglas plane, which has been in service only a few days, was low enough to have struck the trees during a left bank when it should have had about 800 feet altitude at that point in its swing from and to the field. They said the ship was on the course and at about the usual point for turning about to return to the port.

Survivors Tell Harrowing Stories

Jonesboro, Ga., Feb. 27 (INS).—Survivors of the airliner crash today told harrowing stories of the long wait for help in the hours before dawn. Several of the injured, including Capt. Rickenbacker, were pinned in the wreckage.

Automobile lights could be seen on the road half a mile away, but the shouts of the survivors failed to attract the attention of the motorists.

The survivors prayed in the darkness, hoping that the wreckage would not catch fire. Capt. Rickenbacker, dazed and in pain, warned the others "Don't strike a match—Don't strike a match—There's gasoline all around here."

The injured were carried down the hillside to the waiting ambulances on improvised stretchers. Rescuers said that Capt. Rickenbacker's head slipped on his stretcher while he was being carried, and he muttered vaguely: "Don't let me fall off, fellows."

When rescuers arrived, they had to call for a caterpillar tractor to pull the wreckage apart before they could get the bodies of the pilot and co-pilot.

One of the survivors, C. M. Tappen, said:

"I had been asleep, but the crash waked me and I found myself lying under piles of wreckage—it felt like 4 tons of it. We had to lie under the wreckage for hours, afraid to move for fear we would bring the whole thing down on us. We could see the cars passing along the road and we yelled to them as loud as we could, but we couldn't make them hear. Finally, some one who was not hurt very badly went after help."

Jim Hunt, a farmer, and W. P. Matlock, of Jonesboro, told of hearing the plane.

Hunt said he heard the crash, but "it sounded just like some blasting work that they are doing on a construction job a couple of miles away and I thought that was what it was."

From Piedmont Hospital, in Atlanta, Capt. Rickenbacker issued a reassuring message to his friends through Dr. Louis D. Newton, a Baptist minister. Capt. Rickenbacker said:

"I'm bruised but not broken in spirit. I appreciate the interest of my friends."

Chase Ends With Death . . .

BULLET IN HIS BRAIN—Murphy Hubbs, 36, of 1328 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, lies dead on the parking lot in the 700 block of Eleventh Street Northwest said, Hubbs jumped from the car, and ran east on H Street. Gaylor followed. Hubbs swung to the left through a gas station at Twelfth and H, Gaylor said. Attendants reported later he was swinging a gun then, and they ducked.

Hubbs, according to witnesses, ran across Twelfth Street, vaulted a 3-foot wall, and ran through the Greyhound Bus Terminal. Gaylor tripped as he attempted to leap the wall, but shouted, "Get that man."

Joins the Chase

Francis, employed in the terminal baggage room, followed Hubbs out the Eleventh Street side of the terminal. Hubbs, police were told, started across Eleventh Street, brushed against a passing cab, and turned back to the sidewalk.

An eye-witness, William T. Clupp, 31, of 1230 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, told police he was driving past on Eleventh and saw Francis grapple with Hubbs.

Clupp said he heard a muffled report and saw Francis collapse to the sidewalk. He picked the injured man up and drove him to Emergency Hospital.

Hubbs ran south in Eleventh Street. Meanwhile, police said, a taxi-driver speeded past him, and warned Buscher, who was directing traffic at Eleventh and G Streets Northwest.

Buscher ran north. When Hubbs spotted the policeman coming, he turned into the parking lot, on the west side of Eleventh Street.

Buscher said the man turned, waved his gun, and fired once.

Proved a Suicide

Just as Buscher fired back from 25 feet, Hubbs dropped to the ground, so that he thought his bullet killed the fugitive. Smoke burns found on the dead man's clothes and a witness' report that he saw Hubbs turn the gun on himself, led to an investigation which definitely proved Hubbs a suicide.

Located by police after the shooting, the woman told them that Hubbs had threatened to kill her and her husband and himself and was waiting to carry out his threat when she called Police Headquarters.

The woman asserted that Hubbs had been friendly with her, had in fact persuaded her to leave her husband. Recently, however, the woman told police, she had made a reconciliation with her husband.

Yesterday afternoon, she said, Hubbs accosted her in the beauty parlor where she is employed, and when she ordered him away, Hubbs made the threats and took a stand outside the store.

Police received a signed statement from the woman, an attractive redhead, who will appear today at the inquest.

Little was known about Hubbs. Police learned that Hubbs has worked here as a grocery clerk at various times and had changed his address often. Also a redhead, he was 5 feet 11 inches tall and dressed conservatively.

Fingerprints Checked

Last Christmas eve he was arrested for reckless driving. The case came up before Police Court on February 21, and was postponed. Hubbs was held on $500 bond. A warrant was issued against him January 12 for running through a red light signal but police were unable to find him. A check was being made with the F. B. I. fingerprint division to learn whether Hubbs had a criminal record. Hubbs' wife, Janie, is believed to be living in Knoxville with her mother-in-law.

At Emergency Hospital early this morning the condition of Francis, who was shot by Hubbs was said to be serious. He had been wounded in the arm and chest, apparently by a single bullet. A graduate of Central High School, class of '39, Francis had been working for the bus company for the past eight months.

Was Star Athlete

A former Western High School star athlete, 27-year-old Private Buscher has often been in the news. Known to his friends as "Doc," Buscher, in 1932, held all District high school swimming titles from 440 yards to 3 miles.

At Clemson (S. C.) College, Buscher was a member of the football team and captain one season. He was married last fall and is studying law at Southeastern Law School.

Survivor Tells Tragic Story Of Air Crash

By J. S. Rosenfeld, sr.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 27.—The plane began losing altitude about midnight and I thought we were ready to land at the Atlanta airport.

It was very warm in the plane and I called a steward to unbuckle my safety belt so that I could move about in my berth. I think now it was lucky for me that he did.

A minute later, the right side of the ship, on which I was sleeping, lurched sharply and I heard a terrible noise—a shearing, crumpling sound that is hard to describe. Then there was a quick jolt and I was sailing through the air, tumbling over and over. I remember thinking this is the end.

But I landed on a soft mound of earth and rolled over several times. Then I remember thinking how lucky I am. I didn't seem to be hurt. It was hard to realize what had happened.

"This is Rosenfeld," I called out my name.

It Was Cold and Raining

Other passengers then answered by calling their names.

It was raining and so dark we couldn't see anything. I was clad only in my pajamas. I was barefoot. It was very cold.

I went over to the wreckage and felt around until I found someone's leg. It was Brady (P. L. Brady, Hollis, N. Y.). I pulled him out of the wreckage and helped him over to a log.

There were moans and cries of help coming from the plane and from on the ground around it. I helped one or two others to get out.

Then I went back to the plane and found a blanket. Sewell (R. B. Sewell, Atlanta) had a pillow over his head to keep off the rain. He and I got under the blanket and huddled together to try to get warm.

We were shaking and nervous. We told jokes and tried to laugh to keep up our spirits.

Survivor Follows Dog

Some of the passengers yelled to try to attract someone to the scene. Only a dog barking somewhere in the night answered our cries.

A dog came by after a while and one of the men followed it off. When he didn't come back we were afraid that he was out of his head and lying out on the hill somewhere.

A plane flew over and someone suggested building a fire to signal it, but Capt. Rickenbacker, who was pinned in the plane, stopped us. He was afraid that the high-test gasoline dripping from the plane would be ignited.

He kept saying, "I'm sorry that it had to happen." He was wonderful.

After a couple of hours I borrowed Sewell's shoes and, wrapped in the blanket, started out to try to find help.

Falls Into Ravine

I hadn't gone far before I stumbled into a deep ravine. The fall didn't hurt me, but the walls were steep and it was so dark that I couldn't get out. I stood there in water nearly to my knees for about two more hours, until it was light enough to see how to get out.

I went on down and found a house where I got a man up, but he didn't have a telephone. He drove me to a store where I called the sheriff and reported the accident.

I rode into town in one of the ambulances.

I'm going on to New Orleans. I'm afraid that if I don't fly right away I never will want to again, and I don't want that to happen.

All during the night I kept thinking about a telegram I had sent my wife, telling her that I'd be home at 5:10 this morning.

Shift in Plans Saved Two From Air Crash

Three of the dead in the crash yesterday of an Eastern Air Lines sleeper boarded the plane at Washington Airport.

Space for two of them on the ride to death was made by last-minute changes in the traveling plans of Drew Pearson, Washington newspaperman, and County Judge Roy Hofheins, of Houston, Tex., who was in the Capital for a flood control conference with President Roosevelt.

The President, Judge Hofheins believes, saved his life. Mr. Roosevelt called off the conference, scheduled for Wednesday, and then decided to hold it yesterday. Informed of the change in the President's plans, Judge Hofheins canceled a reservation on the death plane. He left for Houston last night by train.

Pearson was to have taken the plane to keep a speaking engagement in New Orleans. He was in New York at the time attending trial of a suit filed against him and a colleague, Robert S. Allen, by Representative Martin L. Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio. When it began to look as though the trial would take longer than he had anticipated, Pearson retained his reservation only as far as Washington.

Pearson advised Sweeney of his chance escape. Sweeney, whose suit is for $7,000,000 damages, replied, in part:

"May God spare you from any fatal accidents or violence of any sort."

Juan Maria, of San Salvador, and A. L. Liebowitz, of Atlanta.

The El Salvador Legation said Maria, whose father owns a cotton mill in the South American country, was in Washington on business and, presumably, was returning home.

Another passenger on the Washington leg of the flight was identified by the New York office of the air line as C. Hooper, Jackson Heights, Queens.

Army Rushes Air Units To Reinforce Alaskan Bases

By George Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

Powerful reinforcements are being rushed to Alaskan air defenses, Secretary of War Stimson announced yesterday.

Four-fold expansion of the parachute battalion already trained also was announced.

Shifted from West Coast bases, three strong bomber and pursuit groups are scheduled to leave soon for Seward Field, Alaska, on the heels of three other units which had already departed, he said.

Meanwhile, the Navy Department announced awarding of defense contracts for aeronautics and ordnance plants, and drydock facilities totaling more than $26,000,000.

The Army Secretary said the Eighteenth Pursuit Squadron left Fort Mason, Calif., February 8 and arrived at Seward last Sunday. He said the headquarters squadron of the Twenty-eighth Composite Group and part of the Twenty-third Airbase Squadron from the same California center were scheduled to arrive at Seward late yesterday.

Another detachment of the Twenty-third Air Base group will depart from Fort Mason for Seward March 15, and the personnel of the Seventy-third Bombardment group, except for pilots, will embark at Seattle for the same Alaskan base March 22. Fliers and planes of the Seventy-third will leave McChord Field, Wash., for Seward April 15.

The War Department chief resonnel or planes moving northward with the remark: "I don't like to make the War Department a center for specific information to go to our friends—or non-friends—abroad."

Other developments reported by Stimson and Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson:

The single battalion of 412 men and 34 officers in parachute training at Fort Benning, Ga., will be expanded four-fold because of the success of the experiment.

The first Negro tank battalion will be organized as part of the armored force. With its formation, Negroes will be represented in every branch of the Army.

Production of planes is improving and that of small arms is satisfactory, Patterson reported, although much of the program is still in the tooling-up stage. Light and medium tanks are being turned out slightly ahead of schedule although delivery of heavy tanks is not yet in sight.

cials emphasized, is an independent agency. The Air Safety Board has been abolished and its duties assigned to an Air Safety Bureau operating under the present board.

Enforcement of air safety rules adopted by the board is one of the tasks of the Civil Aeronautics Administration. The administration is under the Commerce Department.

The administration, according to an official memorandum, "is charged with issuance of certificates of airworthiness of aircraft and components after tests and inspections; examination and certification of airmen, including the denial of aircraft, airmen and other safety certificates when deemed necessary, and the renewal of existing certificates.

"Investigation of violations of the safety provisions of the Civil Aeronautics Act, as well as infringements of the safety rules promulgated by the Civil Aeronautics Board in the civil air regulations, come under the administration."

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, protested as "not quite fair" McCarran's charge that recent airline accidents resulted from Government negligence or changes in the law.

"We ought at least to withhold our judgment with respect to the present accident until the facts are known," Barkley said.

Congress' action in permitting the reorganization to take effect has "come back to haunt the Senate," Clark asserted.

"When the reports are in and we have determined the cause of these crashes," said Clark, "we shall take action on the legislation sponsored by Senator McCarran or any other legislation which may have bearing on the problem."

Clark's subcommittee is specifically empowered to investigate accidents.

House Expresses Sorrow

Just before adjourning at 1 p. m. out of respect for Representative Byron, the House adopted a resolution of "profound sorrow." Speaker Rayburn named Representatives Cole, D'Alesandro, Mayer and Ward, all of Maryland, to attend the funeral

In offering the adjournment resolution, House Majority Leader McCormack observed: "We are going to miss him in the deliberations of this body."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, described Byron as a "most lovable fellow" who, he said, "was beginning to make what I am sure would have been a fine record in Congress.

He will be greatly missed by all who had the privilege of knowing him," Tydings added.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, of which Byron was a former member, declared:

"Bill Byron was a gentleman in the finest sense of the word. His colleagues and many friends will miss the companionship of a splendid character.

Frank Caldwell, Civil Aeronautics Board investigator, reached Atlanta last night. Other Federal investigative officials went into conference with air line officials there as the inquiry got under way.

Pictures will be made of the wreckage today and all instruments and parts of the plane will be taken to shops in Atlanta and dismantled for whatever accident-cause clews that may be found.

The tragedy occurred, it was learned six minutes after the plane passed the radio control station at the Atlanta airport, indicating a crash approximately as the pilot was banking his ship preparatory to landing. Under normal circumstances, it was said, the ship would have been 800 feet above the ground and shortly after turning back to the airport would have "let down" farther.

Three other planes, it was pointed out, made safe landings under precisely the same conditions and within 45 minutes of the crash.

The series of fatal plane accidents began last August with the death of Senator Lundeen and 24 others in a crash of a Pennsylvania-Central Airlines plane at Lovettsville, Va.

Other recent accidents: November 4, 1940, near Salt Lake City, Utah, 10 killed; December 4, 1940, at Chicago, 9 killed; January 23, 1941, at St. Louis, Mo., 2 killed.

wife, though," he added, smiling. A discouraging word from Justice James M. Proctor cut off this line of testimony.

On leaving G. H. A., Dr. Hulbert said he was readmitted to the Georgetown Hospital staff and is now a member in good standing of the District Medical Society, one of the defendants in the antitrust trial.

Dr. Hurlburt was with Group Health Association from its opening in November, 1937, until the following April.

Another former G. H. A. staff man, Dr. Francis X. Richardson, followed Dr. Hurlburt on the stand. He said he joined the organization in December, 1937, to make home calls exclusively at a salary of $150 a month. Later is was raised to $200. He said he resigned on July 15, 1938.

A wave of objections by the defense halted his recitation of what took place in a Sibley Hospital cloakroom earlier that same day, when two District Medical Society members engaged him in conversation. Dr. Richardson will resume on the stand this morning.

A large part of the documentary evidence presented to the grand jury yesterday was correspondence describing the shuttling back and forth of checks written by G. H. A. in payment for hospital services to members.

Returned Check

It started when Dr. Lewis H. Taylor, then president of Sibley Hospital, returned a $66.80 check to William C. Kirkpatrick, then president of G. H. A.

We can't accept this check in settlement of a bill we rendered one of your members, wrote Dr. Taylor, in effect, because our board of directors has not yet acted on admission of G. H. A. doctors.

This was early in February, 1938.

A few days later, according to material subpenaed by the Government, Dr. Taylor sent a memorandum to the Sibley admitting office urging that every precaution be taken to keep out G. H. A. patients, as such, and to reject checks made out by the cooperative.

Another memorandum was posted which listed the names of G. H. A. doctors and ordered that they not be admitted at any time.

Several days after returning the $66.80 check, Dr. Taylor got it back, along with a long letter of explanation from Kirkpatrick.

Back came the check to Kirkpatrick in the next mail, Dr. Taylor stating the hospital would be paid only by the patient or her brother

Much the same performance was repeated in June, 1938, when a $31 bill and a different G. H. A. member were involved. This time, though, after Dr. Taylor had returned it to Kirkpatrick and the latter had mailed it back to Sibley, the hospital president forwarded it to the patient and asked that the bill be paid in cash.

Instead, G. H. A. got the check back again, had it certified by the Riggs National Bank and sent it on to Sibley once more. Then it took another ride to the former patient's house, with the request repeated that the bill be paid in cash.

Just how the two check-shuttling cases finally came out was not disclosed yesterday. The denouement will come today, Government counsel said.

On May 11, 1938, the District Medical Society voted to forbid its members to accept either cash or checks for services given G. H. A. beneficiaries, according to the minutes of its meeting on that date.

The motion was made by Dr. R. Arthur Hooe, one of the defendants, after he informed the society that the lawyers conferred with had recommended that D. M. S. members refuse the association's checks. The lawyers were George Hoover and Leahy.

"Nothing But a Bubble"

At a meeting of the medical group on April 11, 1938, Dr. Francis X. McGovern told his colleagues "the G. H. A. was now nothing but a bubble."

Dr. McGovern is one of the 20 individual doctors on trial, along with the American Medical Association, District Medical Society, Washington Academy of Surgery and Harris County (Texas) Medical Society.

At the time of the alleged conspiracy in 1937-38, Dr. McGovern was secretary of the advisory committee to the Garfield Hospital medical staff.

It was that committee which recommended against the granting of courtesy privileges to Dr. Raymond E. Selders, G. H. A. staff surgeon.

Dr. Selders, no longer associated with the Federal employes' health clinic, again figured in evidence submitted yesterday when Government counsel read minutes of a meeting of the Georgetown Hospital medical staff.

Dr. Selders had been permitted to bring an emergency case into the institution and the question now was whether the emergency still existed, 48 hours later. After spirited debate, it was voted that the emergency was over and Dr. Selders must withdraw.

Farm Leaders Ask U.S. Loans To Peg Prices

By the Associated Press

Pointing to the billions of dollars going to industry and labor for national defense outlays, farm leaders yesterday demanded that Congress give them a slice of this prosperity by "price-fixing loans" on cotton, wheat, corn, tobacco and rice.

Edward O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the Senate Agriculture Committee that higher farm prices could be obtained by revising the existing Federal program of acreage control, benefit payments and loans.

"Our little two or three hundred million dollars we are asking for is just a little popgun," the veteran farm leader told Senators after recalling Congress already had voted more than $15,000,000,000 for defense.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, and other Senators who listened to the farm proposals, described them as "price fixing," and Russell quickly announced he was willing to support Government fixing of minimum prices on major farm products.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, author of a bill on which hearings were held, asserted that he favored a price-fixing move.

The Farm Bureau president asked Congress to fix a "bottom under farm prices" by making Government loans at 85 per cent of parity, which is defined as the "fair exchange" price for farm products.

Government agencies said the "parity prices" at the start of this year were $1.13 for a bushel of wheat, 82 cents for a bushel of corn, $1.04 for a bushel of rice, 15.87 cents for a pound of cotton, and from 8.8 to 22.4 cents a pound of tobacco, depending on type and grade.

Bankhead's bill was broader, proposing full "100 per cent of parity" loans when marketing restrictions were voted by cooperating growers for all crops except corn. On corn, Bankhead proposed an 85 per cent loan.

The Farm Bureau asked that any surplus above domestic demands be moved into world markets for whatever price it would bring. Any losses on these exports would be paid from a $320,000,000 fund estimated to be available annually from customs receipts.

O'Neal and Senators from cotton, wheat and corn belts agreed that the so-called "ever-normal granary" now is full to overflowing and that the European war had largely cut off markets for cotton, wheat, tobacco, lard, fruits and many other products.

"I opposed the ever-normal granary plan," Bankhead said. "Anyway, we've got it, now what are we going to do about it?"

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, said that "even the corn farmer now has more than he can sell."

O'Neal said "the American people have been getting food and fiber at bankrupt prices too long," adding that "food is just as vital to the national defense as guns, munitions and airplanes."

He estimated the cost of the Farm Bureau's program at $960,000,000, compared with $912,000,000 voted by Congress for this year under the present farm program.

House Bars Closed-Shop Rider, Votes 1½ Billion for Defense

By James D. Secrest

Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday quickly passed and sent to the Senate a $1,533,378,702 supplemental defense appropriation bill after rejecting an amendment designed to prohibit the closed shop on defense projects.

By a vote of 81 to 11 the House refused to accept an amendment which would have prohibited the payment of any of the funds to contractors who have agreements which restrict employment to members of a union.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, in offering the amendment, attacked what he termed "a racket" in which unions collect varying initiation fees before a nonmember workman can get a job in cantonment construction.

"This means that a man cannot work for his country unless he pays tribute to a labor union," Smith said.

While admitting that the House Judiciary Committee is engaged in an investigation of the practice, Smith suggested that the House, by adopting his amendment, could "stop this racket right in its tracks."

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, who was in charge of the bill, swung the House sentiment against the amendment when he took the floor and declared that its effect would be "to tie the national defense program in a knot."

Regardless of what one might think of unions' practice, Woodrum said, the cure does not lie in halting appropriations to contractors who already have the union agreements.

"You couldn't more effectively tie up the defense industries and cantonment construction than by adopting this amendment," he said.

Besides calling attention to the House Judiciary Committee investigation and the testimony of Defense Commissioner William Knudsen, Woodrum expressed the hope that "sensible leaders of labor will realize that the American people are not going to tolerate sabotage of their defense program."

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, suggested that unless the union fee practice were stopped at once, "the racket will continue throughout the defense program."

The House adopted only one amendment to the supply bill, accepting a committee reduction from $71,000 to $11,000 an appropriation for fleet training in the Bureau of Navigation.

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee was successful in having stricken on a point of order a civil service waiver with regard to the temporary employment of certain persons or organizations by the Secretary of the Navy.

The bill carries funds to augment the two-ocean navy with a chain of island outposts and a fleet of armed merchantmen and patrol craft as well as to complete construction of 186 Army cantonments. Approximately $15,000,000 would be expended within this area.

U. S. Will Hire 394,000 More Within Year

Approximately 394,000 employes are to be added to the Federal Government service in the current fiscal year owing to the defense program, it was disclosed yesterday as the Budget Bureau asked for an additional $725,000 for the Civil Service Commission.

Explaining that the commission is handicapped in its efforts to investigate the new employes, the Budget Bureau requested the supplemental funds to augment its staff at once.

The original estimate of employes to be added before July 1, it was said, was 300,000, most of which are being assigned to defense agencies. Present indications are that the figure will be increased by 94,000.

The budget message pointed out that 220,000 employes were taken on by the War and Navy Departments alone between July 1, 1940, and January 31 last.

The Civil Service Commission was given a 1941 appropriation of $4,975,000 for administrative expenses and $3,950,000 from the President's emergency fund. It has a staff of 250 investigators, which the Budget Bureau declared is inadequate.

New Taxes to Pay for Defense Due in Spring, Rayburn Says

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

A new tax bill to help pay the increased cost of the national defense program can be expected "in the spring," Speaker Sam Rayburn indicated yesterday after a conference with Secretary Morgenthau and other Treasury officials.

No decision was taken as to the form of the tax, but it was suggested at the meeting that the goal should be between $1,000,000,000 and $1,500,000,000 of additional income. There was no discussion of new excess profits taxes or a sales tax.

The impending bill is not expected in Congress until after the March 15 returns have come in and a scrutiny has been made of the results of the new tax bills of last session, including the increased personal and corporation income levies and the excess profits tax.

"The idea of those talking about taxes is to write off the defense debt without letting it ride 30 or 40 years," commented Speaker Rayburn after the conference. It was stated that the suggestion had been made at the meeting that the defense debt be liquidated in from 7½ to 10 years.

The question of taxation of State and local securities was discussed, but no conclusions were reached. However, it is understood that this proposal will meet strong resistance in Congress if it should be offered in the form of legislation.

Speaker Rayburn declared: "I haven't talked to a single taxpayer who doesn't seem to be willing to pay more taxes and adopt a sort of pay-as-you-go basis."

At yesterday's conference, in addition to Secretary Morgenthau and Speaker Rayburn, were Undersecretary of the Treasury Bell, Assistant Secretary Sullivan, General Counsel Edward Foley, House Majority Leader John McCormack, Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, member of the committee. The conference was held in the Speaker's office at the Capitol.

Earlier in the day, Secretary Morgenthau said the Treasury would launch a drive on April 1 to sell "baby" bonds in 250,000 postoffices throughout the country.

Bill for WPA Funds Approved by Senate

The Senate completed Congressional action yesterday on a $394,187,775 deficiency appropriation including $375,000,000 for carrying on WPA during the next four months.

Final action came when the chamber adopted the report of a joint committee appointed to compromise House and Senate differences on the measure.

The Senate agreed to a $5,000,000 figure for immediate defense housing needs instead of the $6,670,000 it originally voted.

CONSULT YOUR DOCTOR IF YOU ARE RUPTURED

If he advises you to wear a truss he will probably refer you to the Kloman Instrument Company.

Tom Collins, factory trained expert fitter, with 30 years' experience, will fit you properly with a light weight, washable, sanitary truss, which has no understraps, springs or elastic and will positively not slip either nest the skin or over the underwear. It is invisible and anatomically correct.

Many trusses are improper or improperly fitted, and can cause more harm than good by delivering pressure to delicate nerves and blood vessels, which eventually gives a nervous reaction that saps the vitality and ages the wearer before his time.

Come in and let us examine your truss and adjust it free of charge. We will be glad to explain your rupture to you and teach you the proper method of wearing a truss.

We have the most modern and best trusses. We sell service to ruptured people, which guarantees comfort and proper retention.

Opposition Gains in Senate Spur Lend-Lease Bill Backers

New Mexico, only recently won over by opponents. Chavez renewed the opposition charge that the bill was neither a defense nor a peace bill but might "provoke attack" on the United States.

Highlights of the impromptu debate were:

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, charged that the President is "deliberately holding back aid to England in order to put pressure on this Congress" to pass the lend-lease bill.

Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, retorted that Taft might want to aid England, but "he wants to aid them only $2,000,000,000 worth, so they will get beat." He charged Taft wanted both sides in the future to "think he was for them."

Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, challenged Taft's statement that "the real advocates of this bill are in favor of it because it does authorize the President to go to war if he thinks that will aid England." Taft modified his statement.

Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, charged that Wendell L. Willkie promised to support "all-out" aid to Britain at a pre-election dinner in New York at the home of Mrs. Ogden Reid. Danaher said Willkie then promised to support "what was necessary to guarantee that Britain would not lose."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, announced he would support the bill but sought assurances from leaders that the President would not be empowered "to give away our Navy."

Senator Sheppard took the floor late in the day to assert that the Axis powers are challenging "our future existence," and that the aid bill will give America time to arm for defense. He said, "We have no choice" but to accept the challenge.

"Without defensive armament and without steps such as are involved in the pending measure we shall be vulnerable to their assaults," declared the Senate Military Affairs chairman.

He declared the Axis powers regard "our very existence as a challenge to their claim of world dominion, to their exploitation of weaker peoples, to their economic control of the sources of raw materials . . ."

"Spells War," Says Chavez

"A measure like the present one," said Sheppard, "may prevent them from reaching the stage of an actual conflict of arms with us by aiding democracies now at war and place us in a better position to meet their other challenges."

Senator Chavez, who deserted the "doubtful" column to oppose the bill, preceded Sheppard with the opposition cry—that the bill "spells war."

The New Mexico Senator argued that the United States would lose democracy at home if it fought for it abroad. Contending the bill would weaken United States defenses, Chavez said "if I have only one gun, I shall not saw it through the middle and send one-half overseas.

Chavez said there were "ways to provoke attack" and charged "this is precisely what provisions of the lend-lease bill would do—authorize and provoke attack."

Opening debate with a speech for the bill, Senator Brown said he staked his vote on a trust in the President which he declared the opponents lack. Quoting from the Democratic platform peace plank and the President's promise to stand on it, Brown said:

"I base my vote on the bill upon that promise. I base my support of his (the President's) leadership upon that promise. I trust him in this crisis. My countrymen told me to trust him. I trust him to do all possible to save my land and my sons from a fate which impends through no fault of ours and from which God grant that we may be spared."

Brown warned that an Axis victory would force the United States to build up a defensive military machine "the like of which the world has never seen," and would inevitably lead to "an America Prussianized as was Germany under the Kaiser, as is Germany under its present master."

In the side-skirmishing, Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, asked the Senate to lay the lend-lease bill aside in favor of the Taft substitute for a $2,000,000,000 credit grant to Britain.

During ensuing discussion, Taft made the charge that brought George to his feet with a challenge. Taft had declared "everybody who has talked to the Administration" knew that the proposal was "to give the President power to conduct an undeclared war."

George said Taft's statement "does not accord with the facts."

"His (Taft's) statement was that everyone who had talked with the President knew that the purpose was to enable the President to carry the country into war," said George. "That is not in point of fact true."

"I did not say the President," replied Taft. "I said the Administration."

"The statement was," said George, "that everyone who had talked with the Administration then knew that the purpose of this bill was to enable the President to declare war or to carry us into war. . . .

"I have great respect for the Senator and I have talked with the Administration and if the Senator means to say that I know that that is the purpose of the Administration, then the Senator is simply misstating the facts."

Taft—"I did not mean to say that, no."

George—"Wall, I'm glad the Senator does not."

Senator Tydings interrupted Senator Brown to declare himself for the bill but to express fears that the bill empowered the President to give away naval vessels it would be impossible to replace.

"It seems to me," replied Brown, "that this is the same kind of an argument as if we should say to the President: 'Mr. President, you may nominate and appoint a new judge in the city of Chicago to the Circuit Court of Appeals, but under no circumstances should you appoint Al Capone.' We assume that he is not going to do any such foolish thing as that."

Steel Strike Near End, OPM Believes

Labor Board order to desist from aiding an alleged company-sponsored union. The S. W. O. C. local at Lackawanna added a demand for a 25 per cent wage increase.

Informed OPM sources indicated that they did not view the proposed settlement as a final solution to labor trouble in the Bethlehem plants, which together, have an estimated $1,500,000,000 in defense orders, but that they expected it at least to be effective in ending the work stoppage for the time being.

From Pittsburgh the Associated Press reported that Murray declined to comment on the proposal, but that an associate remarked it "seems to incorporate what we suggested be done."

The sudden calling of the strike, while officials here was seeking to avert it was characterized by Hillman last night as "unfortunate" and other OPM labor officials privately admitted it seriously jeopardized prospects for a settlement.

At her press conference yesterday, Labor Secretary Perkins was outspoken in her regret at the precipitous action.

"It was most unfortunate," she said. "It is hard to help people if they won't give you any time to do it. It is extremely difficult for us when sudden action is taken without giving well-intentioned and bona fide people a chance to make suggestions for settlement, especially if compromises are to be made."

At Lackawanna, meanwhile, Buffalo police increased their guard to maintain order around the huge plant after a melee during the day in which Patrolman Albert Brumm was injured. The scuffle occurred when six mounted policemen escorted a car through the picket lines which the strikers had thrown up around the mill. Police Capt. Thomas J. McMahon said that pickets "used their fists" and policemen their nightsticks.

Strikers charged the police with "brutal and unwarranted" action and declared that they "apparently are attempting to provoke a riot." By nightfall, a total of 109 police were delegated to guard the plant.

ROSITA RIOS, topflight South American songstress, will make her bow at Troika on Monday. Senorita Rosita comes here directly from Florida's uppity Palm Island Casino and will remain at Troika for two weeks before leaving for New York's Capacabana, where she will succeed Adelaide Moffett as headlined singer . . . This gives you only three more days to enjoy the enchantment of Gypsy Markoff's accordioning and singing of Hungarian and Rumanian music. If you have a favorite among the works of Liszt, Brahms or Chopin, tell Gypsy and she'll play in the manner unforgettable

Ida Mae Clarke will introduce both electric organ and accordion interlude music to the Lounge Riviera when she opens there on Monday. There was some difficulty about finding room for Ida's electric organ, but her beautiful solos will repay all trouble.

"IT'LL BE A GREAT DAY TOMORROW" in the Neptune Room with folks cram-jamming in for the opening of the Dalton Boys, Lina D'Acosta and Ben and Bertie Hellman. But it'll be a great night tonight in Neptune, too, with hundreds of friendly admirers saying goodby to Milt Herth's Herthquakes and singer Gene Archer, a group whose brilliant music and fine personalities have won practically uncrackable popularly records. Milt will combine vacationing and record-making in the next few weeks. Gene will continue his radio engagements.

"STYLES IN BOOGIE-WOOGIE NIGHT" will be celebrated in Wardman's Metronome Room on Monday. The boogie-woogie pianistics of Jack Ross have caused such an approving ado that Maestro Tommy Marvin has planned a b.w. evening. Every dance set will include an agile boogie-woogie session and there'll be novelty acts by band members. The party marks Tommy's initial experimentation with the Will Bradley idea of building all arrangements around the b. w. theme.

SIGNS OF SPRING. Esquirian "Admiral" Jimmy Byrd, promotion manager of Mayfair, and Maestro Paul Kain are going in for spring-like slashes of color in their attire. Paul has been sporting a red and green tie with matching handkerchief. It calls for smoked glasses. Jimmy was only a shade more conservative, with a claret colored cravat and harmonizing hankie in checks . . . Eileen George of the Anchor Room is wondering if a tattooed posy on her midriff wouldn't add a nice touch of color to that white midriff decolletage grown she bought for the President's Birthday Ball. "Maybe I'd better try a couple of decalcomanias first," she said thoughtfully.

Bureau Asked To Safeguard Minorities

Creation of an office of Minority Relations in the Interior Department, authorized to spend $500,000 a year in investigating and publicizing "the activities and connections" of persons publishing attacks on racial or religious groups, was proposed in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa.

The bill would require that any printed matter designed to influence a national election by "exposing to hatred or contempt" any person because of his race, religion or descent must carry full details as to the author and sponsor of the publication.

The same bill would make it unlawful to circulate printed matter of any kind, concerning a candidate for national office, unless the publication listed the names and addresses of the author and sponsor.

The Office of Minority Relations would be headed by an $8,000-a-year director, appointed by the President from a list submitted by the regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

Authority to issue subpenas for the appearance of witnesses and exhibits would be given the director. The bill charges the Office of Minority Relations with responsibility for giving the widest possible circulation to information on the publishers and authors of material hostile to American religious or racial minorities.

Both bills were referred to the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections.

War or Peace Up to President, Dr. Lowe Declares

War or peace is "a Presidential problem for the next 30 or 90 days" and "nothing in the lend-lease bill can blot out that elementary fact," Dr. James T. Lowe, of Georgetown Foreign Service School, told the District of Columbia Control, Controllers Institute of America, at the Carlton Hotel last night.

"It has been the Chief Executive who has plunged the country into war or kept us out in every instance from 1812," declared the political science professor.

"... The lend-lease bill, as a matter of fact, does very little to increase the powers of the President, that is, in the field of conduct of foreign relations. It gives him the power to invite the war to America by opening of our ports to the belligerents; it paves the way for our entry via the financial route; and it makes the President instead of Congress the judge of the extent to which the American taxpayer shall finance the present European, African and Asiatic wars. But aside from that, the lend-lease bill is an unimportant piece of legislation."

The Gallup Poll

Public Sentiment for Lease-Lend Bill Dips Following Heated Debate in the Senate

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 27.—Public sentiment for President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill as measured by an Institute survey has shown a slight decline since the Senate debate of the measure began two weeks ago. Coincidental with the sharp attack on the bill by the Senate isolationist bloc, the number of American voters who favor outright passage of the bill has dropped to 55 per cent—a decrease of three percentage points since the Institute's last survey reported February 14. However, the number who favor passage is still more than twice as large as the number in outright opposition to the bill.

In the two week period since the last survey, Senate opponents of measure have dubbed it a "green light for war," while its supporters have argued that its passage was essential to national defense and to facilitate British aid in the expected spring crisis.

55% Favor Passage

To measure the effect of the arguments pro and con, the American Institute of Public Opinion interviewed a representative sample of the nation's voters during the period February 16 through 24, using the following question:

"Do you think Congress should pass the President's lease-lend bill?"

The trend of sentiment among those who had heard of the bill—more than nine persons in every ten had—is as follows:

	Feb. 9	Feb. 14	To-day
Yes	54%	58%	55%
No	22	21	20
Qualified Opinions	15	14	11
No Opinion	9	7	14

In all three surveys the persons giving qualified answers commonly stressed their desire for a time limit in the bill, for a provision against ships or convoys abroad, and a provision against sending an American expeditionary force. With the time-limit provision now in both the Senate and House versions of the bill, the pro portion of qualified answers has dropped somewhat, as the table shows.

Two Effects of Debate

Apparently the heated Senate debate and threatened filibuster have had two specific effects on public opinion concerning the bill.

First, the number definitely in favor of the bill, without qualifications, has dropped from 58 per cent to 55 per cent.

Second, as the debate goes on, the number of persons who are uncertain in their attitude toward the bill increases, as evidenced by the fact that the "no opinion" vote is today double what it was two weeks ago.

The Party Vote

A decline of sentiment for the lease-lend bill is observable in the rank and file of both Democrats and Republicans, as the following trend indicates:

February 14	Democrats	Republicans
Favor the Bill	71%	43%
Opposed	13	30
Qualified Opinions	10	20
No Opinion	6	7

Today	Democrats	Republicans
Favor the Bill	57%	41%
Opposed	13	28
Qualified Opinions	6	18
No Opinion	14	13

TOMORROW—How has the Senate debate on the lease-lend bill affected public opinion by geographical sections? Has the traditionally isolationist Middle-West turned against the bill? What do people in the three large cities—New York, Philadelphia and Chicago—think of the bill today?

'Come Live With Me' Has Glowing and Subtle Wit

James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr Costarred In Delightful Comedy on Capitol Screen; 'Berserk Revue,' on Stage, Flashes Flippen

"COME LIVE WITH ME." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original story by Virginia Van Upp, adapted to the screen by Patterson McNutt, costarring James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr, with Ian Hunter, Verree Teasdale, Donald Meek, Barton McClane, Edward Ashley, Ann Codee, King Baggot, Frank Orth, Frank Faylen and Horace MacMahon. Produced and directed by Clarence Brown. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

IN "COME LIVE WITH ME"—a titular admonition sometimes observed with disastrous results by impetuous young romanticists—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has demonstrated that ominous implications can be discreetly glossed over and made the basis of smart, smooth and subtle comedy. To the literate and "sophisticated" audience, the picture which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, will be an innocuous and almost incessant delight. It is tricked out with devastating dialogue—for informed and attentive ears—and is alive with situations that have in them all of the fireworks of explosive human relationships. Not continuously combustible, the piece still is safely on the exhilarating and exciting side.

BELL

There was, it seems, a demoralizingly beautiful Viennese refugee, whose time in America had been grossly overstayed. She was having herself a time with a middle-aged publisher who had an "understanding" with his wife. Now, if she could just be safely married to an American citizen—any American citizen—her deportation problems would be solved and the "affair" with the bookman continued practically indefinitely. So in a rainstorm, such as drives every unprepared pedestrian into the nearest cafeteria for a cup of Java, this Johanna Janns, who conveniently becomes "Johnny Jones," elects an impecunious young writer, "Bill" Smith, to be the means of her salvation. Bill can prove he is a writer by the bale of rejection slips he has accumulated from all the better typemen. But he goes for the dizzy circumstance hook, line and one of the oars and perceives in his unexpected predicament of being married to a gal whose address he does not even know, the basis of the best story he even has contrived. The publisher who gets the manuscript is the one Bill's "wife" wishes to marry, by the grace of the divorce courts, uxorial cooperation and what not. Out of this basic problem of passionate and compassionate complexities, Virginia Van Upp fabricated a pretty smart bit of fluff that Patterson McNutt has adapted to the celluloids with abundant skill.

It is not always too brisk in movement, but still manages to sparkle through even the most lethargic of its interludes by the deftness of the humor it is able to flash almost continuously.

With characteristic shrewdness, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—more specifically Clarence Brown, producer-director—has assembled a cagey cast to lend the charade the glamour and the shimmer it requires. James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr are in the costellar roles, as the ravishing young refugee and the youthful author who finally stumbles upon a bullet-proof plot. Ian Hunter and Verree Teasdale are amiably assigned to the roles of the publisher and his undeluded wife, and Donald Meek, of all people, appears in the role of a vagabond of the park benches who has a bankroll pinned in his pants pocket and intimates that Mr. Stewart would make a fine bum, if he only had a little more will power and strength of character. They combine to make "Come Live With Me" one of the more sagacious light comedies of the season. There are others involved who do the picture no harm whatever. These include such veterans of funmaking as Frank Orth, Ann Codee, his wife; Barton McClane, whose activities usually are on the more sinister side, and Horace MacMahon, a terrific taxi driver.

Gene Ford's "Berserk Revue," at the Capitol this week, is not so crazy a stage show as he must have thought when he gave it that title. To these ailing eyes and aging ears it seemed one of the best broken out on F Street in recent weeks. This personal enthusiasm might be traced, no doubt, to the fact that that volcanic vulgarian of the varieties, Jay C. Flippen, is master of ceremonies and chief funster of the gaily-paced goings-on. This Mr. Flippen, as everybody must know by now, is a card. The ace, as a matter of fact. He pulls a few fast ones, this time around, that are almost too swift for easy consumption, but when the score is added up he is 'way out in front.

Among the other "Berserkians" on the bill are Gil and Bernie Mason, with as fine a menagerie of highly trained, untrained animals as ever frustrated a master; Marjorie Gainsworth, the brilliant soprano so popular in Washington; Bob Neller, Bergen's closest rival as a ventriloquist, with a dummy that might give Charlie McCarthy a palpitation or two; Billy Branch & Co., in their Apache-Jiu Jitsu violences, and the Rhythm Rockets, who are in and out all over the place—mostly in.

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 27 (INS).—At last talented June Preisser is out from under the shadow of the Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland musicals. Buddy De Sylva, who knows talent when he sees it, today signed little Preisser on a seven-year contract at Paramount, where they aren't overcrowded with juvenile wonders. She will first appear in "Henry for President," the next in the Aldrich Family series and then in an important musical—probably "Louisiana Purchase." She will not only do her acrobatic dancing which made her and her sister, Cherry, famous, but she'll do other dance routines as well.

PARSONS

June Preisser is a great little show woman and, given the same opportunity in a movie that she had on the stage, there will be no stopping her.

"In This Our Life," the new Ellen Glasgow novel, has been sold to Warners for $40,000 for Errol Flynn and Olivia De Havilland. Olivia, who is the new hope of the Warner lot since "Strawberry Blonde," was criticized continually for her prop smile and for the fact that she was always just a nice girl. She does a flirtatious scene in "Strawberry Blonde" that marks her as an "oomph" girl of a high order. I had never looked upon her as a siren, but keep your eye on her in the future and see if she doesn't set a new high for herself.

Universal will spend $1,000,000 to woo adult audiences, as well as the kids, over to the serial idea. And $1,000,000 is a lot of wooing, I'd say, for any movie. Let me tell you about "Overland Mail." This expensive continued-in-our-next "Western" is based on the opening of mail routes to the West and there is an adult story furnished by Johnston McCulley, writer of the original "Mark of Zorro." A Western star will be selected, supported by such fine, older riders of the sage as Leo Carrillo, Johnny Mack Brown and Andy Devine. Just to prove there's no foolin' about the caliber of the serial, it's to be booked into first-run houses along with the pictures of Deanna Durbin and other top stars.

Loretta Young, who had made all her plans to go to New York and join her husband, Tom Lewis, who has been there on radio business, received the good news that Tom is coming here, so now she'll concentrate on her next picture, "Ballerina," which Gregory Ratoff will produce and direct at Columbia, instead of Paramount. But you might as well forget the name "Ballerina," for Columbia is calling it "Tonight Belongs to Us." It is the Lady Eleanor Smith story and, of course, Loretta has some dancing to do.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Frances Robinson, once Bob Riskin's favorite girl friend, will be married to Dan Collins on Sunday; Mrs. Claude Binyon, wife of the well-known script writer, has a date with the stork; the Jane Bryan-Justini Dart heir is expected in April and Bette Davis has promised to be with Jane at that time; Alice Faye and Eddie Norris have kept a date at Charlie Foy's for the last three evenings.

Howard Hawks threatened with the flu, is keeping right on with "Sergeant York"; Edward Small, believe it or not, is the highest bidder so far for Jan Valtin's "Out of the Night"; Quentin Reynolds will be introduced in San Francisco Tuesday night by Douglas Fairbanks, jr.; Linda Darnell has herself a new champagne lynx wrap, the first fur coat she ever owned, for the Academy dinner; Robin Thomas, Michael Strange's son—and John Barrymore's stepson—arrived in town today.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Actor Discouraged By Golf Prowess

Frank Craven, one of Hollywood's leading golf enthusiasts, confessed he has a fanatical fear—that of making a hole-in-one.

"It's" too expensive," Craven told Producer-director Frank Lloyd on the set of "The Lady from Cheyenne."

"Every time I tee off on a short hole I pray that the ball will just land on the green," said Craven. "I am haunted by visions of the only hole-in-one I ever made. It was back East some years ago.

"Word got back to the clubhouse before I did, and every member was lined up at the bar. It was my treat, and the boys all ordered the fanciest—and—costliest—concoctions they could think of. It was a nightmare."

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 27.

That old saying still holds true—a man seldom has honor in his own home town.

It took Quent Reynolds' lecture to set the town straight on Bob Montgomery's ambulance driving in France. It seems Quint and Bob were on the same one. They were near Beauvais when the shelling started, and worked all night removing the injured from a hospital, which had been bombed, to a dressing station. They got the last patient there at dawn, when the station was completely wiped out. The next day France fell, so Bob hitchhiked to the border, got a plane home from Lisbon, "And by the way," said Quint, "I wonder if he's in the house tonight." Bob was, and you should have heard the ovation for him.

It's difficult to believe Katharine Hepburn wore slacks to a reception given by the Governor of North Carolina. It's even harder to believe California's Governor wore lipstick at his inauguration, but it's a fact that Marlene Dietrich wore slacks even to our flossy premieres. When she dared to wear them in Paris, the Parisians laughed her off the street. Ho hum—what a world—with men wearing lipstick and women the pants!

Director Mervyn LeRoy always wanted a red-haired baby. He's not so sure now. He had to have three boys of different ages, beginning at 5—and up, with red hair to match the color of Greer Garson's for the color picture, "Blossoms in the Dust." Well, he looked at so many it practically blinded him, but finally succeeded, and didn't have to resort to the method used in "Life With Father." In that play the members of the cast had to dye.

Incidentally, when Greer Garson was called upon to drive a car in that picture, she said, "But I've never driven. You see, at home I couldn't afford one, and when I arrived here, I hired a chauffeur."

I've been wondering why little Peter Holden, who was so good in "The Great Man Votes," hasn't been on the screen recently. Now it comes out—his parents had troubles, just got through the divorce courts. So now Peter's headed for Hollywood.

The Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon English radio show, which has gone over terrifically and is called "Hi Gang," is about to be made into a picture by them.

Director John Ford started something when he had an accordion play the background music for "The Long Voyage Home." Now Twentieth has hired Vincente Gomez for 25,000 berries to do the scoring for "Blood and Sand," which will feature his guitar and three others.

Leonard Lyons:

TRAVEL: A few months ago John G. Winant, whose constant comparison to Abe Lincoln even includes his inattention to tailors, lunched with Ben Cohen of the Corcoran-Cohen team. Ben's preoccupation with Government matters leaves him no time to compete for Esquire's sartorial honors. Both men discussed the difficulty they have in getting the proper clothes. "Maybe the tailors in London can make me look presentable," said the Lincolnesque Winant . . . "And maybe some day I'll go with you," added the scholarly Cohen, "and see what London tailoring can do for me, too" They both laughed and parted . . . Three weeks ago Winant, appointed as American Ambassador to London, phoned Cohen . . . "Remember that talk we had about our going to London some day?" Winant reminded. "Well, you're coming with me. You're my new Counselor at the Embassy."

LYONS

REGRET: Alexander Ince, who published Stage magazine, lost $70,000 of his own money when that venture was discontinued last week. Ince paid all his employes their final salaries out of his personal funds . . . "I guess you're sorry you ever started publishing," Ince was consoled . . . "No, I'm not sorry," he answered. I'm not sorry for three reasons. One—I had a lot of fun. Two—I learned a lot; too much. And three—A man's GOT to live."

DRAMA: President and Mrs. Roosevelt went to the theater to see Alexander Woollcott performing in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" . . . When Woollcott saw his itinerary and realized that his show would play in Washington, he was determined to have the President see it. And so an ultimatum was presented to the White House—either the cast would give a performance at the White House or else Mr. Roosevelt would come to the theater . . . The White House staff knows what a Woollcott visit means—his domination of the household and the satisfaction of a whim he might have to write a letter to Neysa or an essay on Harpo on the Executive desk during a press conference . . . And so the White House decided to come to Mahomet.

COMBAT: George Earle, the American Minister to Bulgaria, who licked a Nazi officer in Sofia last week, seldom has lost a fight. He once went to school with Bill Bullitt—was challenged by the boy who later became Ambassador to Moscow and Paris—and was licked. Earle didn't forget that. He went to a gym, took some boxing lessons, challenged Bullitt and, this time, won.

SONG: Francis Wickware, one of the editors of Fortune magazine, wrote an article about Cole Porter for his publication. In it he described how Porter writes songs . . . Wickware had some spare time recently, because his wife is in the country. He remembered the Porter article and decided to try Cole's method of writing. He wrote a song called "I. O. U. Lots of Love," brought it to Ted Straeter, the Monte Carlo band leader—and they sold it to BMI.

ROMANCE: A Frenchman who recently arrived here watched Henri Bernstein dancing a tango . . . "You dance well," he told the distinguished playwright. "As for me—well, fortunately, I no longer have to worry about dancing and the ladies. I'm too old" . . . "Stop boasting," Bernstein told him. "You're not too old. It's just that you're a bad lover and won't admit it."

WARNING: John O'Hara, author of "Pal Joey," sat in a night club with Robert Benchley. O'Hara wore his favorite sports jacket—a tweed Brooks model. John began to button it—all the buttons, including the top one, which almost covered his bow tie . . . "Stop right there," said Benchley. "You'll cut off your circulation."

WORK: John Biggers, the $1-a-year head of the Production Division of the OPM, has been working these past months from early morning until far into the night. He has placed his secretarial and stenographic staff on shifts to avoid overtime . . . Last week Biggers was invited to a dinner party at the home of William S. Knudsen. He had arrived at his office that day at 8:30 a. m. worked until 7:15 p. m., when he suddenly remembered the dinner. He started to rush home to dress—and encountered W. Averell Harriman, who is preparing for his mission to London . . . "Now, now," the calm Harriman reproached Biggers. "Since when does the OPM work half-days?"

For D. C. Or Nevada?

Congress has found it literally impossible to eliminate all the disparities of the District income tax law. Concessions have been made to avoid any likelihood of double taxation only to produce charges of discrimination from other sources. In passing judgment upon the amendments tentatively approved yesterday by the House Subcommittee on Fiscal Affairs in the District, therefore, it should be clearly recognized that a bill satisfactory to everyone cannot be drawn.

The chief difficulty is that so few members of Congress seem interested in amending the bill for the benefit of the District. Corporation Counsel Keech was instructed by the House subcommittee to modify his proposed amendments so as to give the States the first opportunity to tax citizens living here but claiming a domicile elsewhere. Under this arrangement a person may live in the District most of his life and pay his taxes to some distant State. That leaves the District under a serious handicap. It means that local residents subject to the tax must provide schools, streets, police protection and other municipal services for a considerable number of other residents who prefer to send their taxes "back home." No income taxes can be collected here from persons "domiciled" in States with income taxes unless the District tax happens to be higher than the State levy. And in most instances it is not.

This concession was approved to give the States preference over the District in the collection of income taxes. Even so, it fails to satisfy Senator McCarran. He will fight the proposed changes, not because they are unfair to the District, but because he believes they discriminate against local residents from Nevada. That State does not have an income tax. Consequently Nevadans living here would be subject to the local levy. Indeed, the Senator wants to abolish the local income tax altogether because it would require residents of his State to pay their share of expenses incurred for the benefit of the city as a whole.

It is particularly disheartening when a member of the Senate District Committee considers District legislation on the basis of what is best for Nevada. When it sits as a city council for Washington, Congress has a very positive obligation to consider the welfare of the local community above the incidental effects that District measures may have upon the residents of other jurisdictions. The seeming inability of Congress to achieve what objectivity is the strongest possible argument for giving the District a larger measure of home rule.

Mogadiscio

"Our armies are tearing—and will tear—your African empire to shreds and tatters," Winston Churchill told the Italian people in his broadcast of December 23. "We are now only at the beginning of this somber tale." He has proved to be as good as his word. The imperial domain acquired by Italy over a period of sixty years with much back-breaking effort is now rapidly approaching a state of complete disintegration.

Since Mr. Churchill spoke the British have made themselves the masters of Cyrenaica and are pressing hard on Tripolitania where Mussolini has been forced to call in the Germans to prevent what is left of Libya from falling into British hands. British troops are also pushing forward in Eritrea; British and Ethiopian forces are driving the Italians before them in Ethiopia. And now, after an amazing campaign of two months, climaxed by an advance of 220 miles in two days, British contingents have occupied Mogadiscio, capital of Italian Somaliland, and the last port of that colony which the Italians have held.

Of course, Italian Somaliland is of neither great economic nor strategic importance. But it does offer an additional base of operations from which to attack the isolated and harassed Italian garrisons in Ethiopia. Mussolini has regarded the subjugation of the latter country as the crowning achievement of his regime. Indeed, to place Ethiopia under the Italian crown Mussolini sacrificed everything—the possibility of keeping Austria as a buffer between Italy and the Third Reich; the League of Nations; the good faith of Italy; and, in the long run, the security and independence of the Italian kingdom itself. Yet, having made these sacrifices, Italy now finds that Ethiopia is about to slip from her hands. With the periphery gone or about to go, the center of Italian East Africa may not long be able to hold out against the hammer blows of the British.

Seething Holland

It is often said that Hitler was forewarned that in all continental Europe the Netherlands would be the most difficult country to digest. The news in the last few days is confirming the warning. Dutch resistance to the New Order, which hitherto has been mainly passive, has burst into overt acts, and army rule has been established in northern Holland to prevent any widespread outbreak. Maybe in this way the Nazis might restore some semblance of order. But, far from bringing about any conformity in the Dutch spirit, repression will keep it glowing the more fiercely, ready to come to the surface at the first opportunity.

The spectacle of a defenseless people unafraid of the tyrant in their midst is an exhilarating sign of the resoluteness of the Dutch democracy. But it is what one had come to expect from Holland. Non-cooperation has been the watchword of the people since the invasion of May 10. This is bad enough for the Nazis, but the solid moral support which the Netherlands are giving to the British must be even more galling. Everybody is said to be listening in on the B. B. C. broadcasts. According to one account, after an anniversary ceremony around the statue of Erasmus, the Hollander who counseled people to say yes to life, the Nazis discovered tags on all the wreaths saying "To the only person in Holland who doesn't listen to the B. B. C." The Dutch are doing their bit, moreover, to prosecute the war from within. It is said, for instance, that the grapevine between the Netherlands and London works so effectively that R. A. F. pilots appear over new airdromes within a few hours of their construction.

The New Order, as Dutch non-cooperation shows, contains the same worm that afflicted Napoleon's continental system. This was best stigmatized in the words of the German List. "It sought the humiliation or destruction and dissolution of other nationalities on the continent for the benefit of France," wrote the German economist, "instead of basing itself upon the elevation and equalization of the other continental countries." Hitler is pursuing the same method. But, whatever he may have done to the German people, the Fuehrer will never be able to bend the Dutch into slavery. They made their own country for themselves, and no other country is such a grand affirmation of what can be accomplished by individual enterprise and individual ingenuity. It is this spirit which has contributed in no small measure to our Americanism. Dutch stock is part of our stock. The Dutch way is part of our way. And we cannot contract out of the common destiny linking us to the cause of freedom which people like the Dutch are so gallantly supporting even in their captivity.

Dangerous Advice

A report on life insurance companies submitted to the Temporary National Economic Committee by two SEC officials suggests that a substantial proportion of insurance funds ought to be invested in common stocks. "The traditional practice of confining investments solely to bonds and mortgages," they state, "should be reexamined in the light of the different conditions which prevail today. The companies are faced with a situation where not enough of the investments of the required type are available and the interest on many of those which are available is too low to meet the companies' interest guaranties; while on the other hand the great capital reservoirs of the insurance companies are closed to a substantial portion of the business world."

It is undoubtedly true that the abnormally low level of interest rates and the increasing reluctance of individual investors to risk their savings in new enterprises creates a grave shortage of venture capital. But the remedy for this condition assuredly does not lie in making the insurance companies assume risks that individual investors are no longer willing to carry. Our life insurance companies are the guardians of funds amounting to between 25 and 30 billions of dollars which they hold in trust for millions of policyholders. Their first obligation is to men and women whose life savings have been given into their keeping as a means of securing protection for dependents and making provision for old age. Thanks to the rigid restrictions upon types of investments imposed by State laws or voluntarily adopted by conservative managements, the life insurance companies have weathered the depression in remarkable fashion. During the decade 1929-38 the assets of insurance companies which had to suspend operations amounted to only 2 per cent of the total for all companies, and actual losses to policyholders have been reduced to less than 1 per cent. As the insurance companies point out in a memorandum to the TNEC, this record of safety is not a "fortuitous circumstance." It is the result of the care taken in confining investments to sound, seasoned securities. It is appalling to think what would have happened if these companies had invested billions of their assets in common stocks during the twenties.

In 1906 the Armstrong investigating committee, of which Charles Evans Hughes was counsel, declared that investments in stocks were "fundamentally objectionable" in case of insurance companies. That judgment is as sound today as it was then. "Safety first" must continue to be the slogan of the insurance companies if they are to serve the purpose for which they were created.

The Atlanta Tragedy

Within the past six months there have been five great passenger airline disasters, each costing from 2 to 25 lives. Among these victims have been two members of Congress—Senator Lundeen of Minnesota, killed at Lovettsville, Va., last summer, and Representative Byron of Maryland, killed yesterday near Atlanta. Here is the complete record:

August 31, Lovettsville, 25 deaths.

November 4, Centerville, Utah, 10 deaths.

December 4, Chicago, 10 deaths.

January 23, St. Louis, 2 deaths.

February 27, Atlanta, at least 7 deaths.

In other words, since August 31 fatalities in commercial airline crashes have averaged slightly more than seven per month. What makes this the more remarkable is that in the 17 months preceding August 31 not a single fatality, and indeed not a single serious accident, occurred on any American airline.

This contrast is certainly startling, though Senator McCarran's attempt to suggest a relationship between the recent series of crashes and what he calls the "hamstringing" of the Civil Aeronautics Authority by placing it under the control of the Department of Commerce seems to be pretty farfetched. These crashes have occurred at a time when the Government has begun to call into active service many commercial pilots who hold Army or Navy reserve commissions and when other pilots have joined the armed services of their own accord. There may be no more to this coincidence than to the one labored by Senator McCarran, but it is worth investigation at least. Certainly the present need of the Army and Navy for thoroughly seasoned pilots and instructors is urgent, but so is the necessity of maintaining the strictest standards of safety in passenger aviation.

This is sufficiently proved by the fact that the Atlanta disaster has suspended and may have ended the aviation career of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, one of the Nation's foremost authorities on the art of flying. By curious irony Representative Byron was another great air enthusiast, having served in the Aviation Corps in the World War. A personable man, Mr. Byron had demonstrated his charm for voters by defeating the popular and much admired Walter Johnson last fall. He had also begun to demonstrate his abilities in Congress. Already he was looked upon in the House and by his colleagues of the Military Affairs Committee as a legislator of much promise. His death is thus not only a loss to his constituents but to his country as well.

Thad H. Brown

The sudden death in Cleveland of Thad H. Brown at the age of 54 years closes a long and varied career in the public service both in his native State, Ohio, and in the Federal Government. Before he had completed his law studies in 1909, Mr. Brown became journal clerk of the Ohio House of Representatives, serving again in that capacity in 1911. Following five years of law practice and service in the Army, he entered politics and in 1922 was elected secretary of state for Ohio. In 1928 Mr. Brown, who by that time had become a recognized leader of the Republican Party in Ohio, engaged actively in the campaign first to nominate and then to elect Herbert Hoover to the Presidency. He was subsequently appointed chief counsel for the Federal Power Commission, then the Radio Commission. Washington was particularly well acquainted with Mr. Brown in recent years as a member of the Federal Communications Commission. The abrupt termination of the career of a trained and conscientious public servant, who, in the normal course of events, would have continued to be active for many years, is cause for deep regret.

IN THIS DARK HOUR
ENGLAND

Now comes the hour when the reluctant heart
Wakens from dreaming; when the golden wall
Of bright imagination falls apart,
And the cloud-bastions of illusion fall.
This is the bleak hour when the shining cloak
Of loved escape is taken from the soul,
And the bared mind must face the thunderstroke,
And put itself against the tempest's roll.
Now, at this time, the spirit must take up
A hammer, and make armor to defend
Its faith, and must put down the spicy cup
Of vision; it must realize dreams' end.
It must acknowledge pain, despair and hate,
And only pray it does not wake too late.

Theory Behind Art

Nothing could be more complete than the frustration experienced by a thoughtful reader looking for some definite idea or even for some vaguely sensed attitude toward art in the confused outpourings of your recent correspondents on the subject. What is beauty? No word in our language is more devoid of objective meaning. It is a shell merely into which the philosopher or critic pours his esthetic ideal. No man has a right to use it until he has at first explained definitely what meaning he intends to convey by it. It is a symbol—no more; and until the esthetic theory behind it is known, it remains an enigmatic symbol.

It is plain that no one of your correspondents has evolved a complete esthetic theory. That in itself is no condemnation. Few of us, artists, laymen, criticis, have done that. The point is this, that a man whose ideas on the subject are not entirely clear would be wise to use some circumspection in discussing it. Your correspondents have not been entirely prudent. To make that fact evident, one has only to ask a few questions. Are beauty and nature synonymous? Are beauty and art synonymous? If one answers yes to these two questions, one must also agree that nature and art are synonymous, a palpable contradiction. Again, are beauty and nature synonymous? Are beauty and perfection synonymous? Are nature and perfection synonymous? When pursued with relentless logic the assertion that nature, considered in all her aspects, is beautiful becomes patently absurd.

Let the writers consider a single natural object, the human figure, and they will have to concede that it is rarely well-proportioned in nature. People tend to forget that the Americans they have observed are not Greek gods and that the sculpture from the Parthenon was as much a creation of the Greek genius as the effigies of the Cameroons are a product of the creative faculties of those African peoples. The esthetically satisfying is, and always has been, an ideal of the human mind rather than a natural product.

It would be of considerable benefit to the art life of this country if layman, artist, and critic alike would approach the subject with humility, a confession of confusion, and a real desire for understanding and growth. It will not help matters for the ignorant to flay away at certain trends in the visual arts, which must inevitably be felt in local exhibitions, simply because they find them somehow objectionable. Condemnation without understanding is a greater promoter of charlatanism and chicanery than collusion. As for the confusion among some of the artists themselves, which no observant person can deny, the even greater confusion of laymen commentators and certain professional critics can do no more than confound it.

Housing Problem In Alexandria

I have taken great interest in noticing in different newspapers throughout the city and environs the attitude the general public has with regard to suffering among the unfortunates of both colors. There has been great response to appeals from the Community Chest, Red Cross, Bundles for Britain, Mile of Dimes, Blood Bank, various hospital organizations, and many other societies and associations for the relief of suffering humanity. This is good and as it should be. It indicates that we are growing more and more from the attitude of the Dark Ages. We even have a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

I want to tell you, however, of a situation which exists in the town of Alexandria which would, if the facts were known, easily go on record as a case meriting mention in Ripley's "Believe It or Not."

Along about the close of the year notices went out to various colored families living in Alexandria, in that area near the railroad tracks between Oronoco and Princess Streets, that, because of the slum clearance in charge of the Housing Authority, these families must vacate the shacks in which they then lived and move to other homes so that other and better houses might be erected there.

Among these families was one woman who has four children, all going to school, dependent upon her. This woman had, some months before, moved into this shack with her married daughter because she had been compelled to vacate the place she had been living in over on the boulevard, which was razed to make way for apartments. She had moved in with her daughter into a four-room house, because at that time there was not another vacant house for colored people in Alexandria which she, on her limited income of about $8 per week, could afford. Now both she and her daughter, with their dependents, must move. The notice which was sent them was all legal, and plenty of time was given them.

However, they did not move. They couldn't move, because there simply was no other place to go. The Housing Authority insisted that they go just the same, and on or about January 2, 1941, the wrecking crews came to tear down the shack.

Another family living in the same block took this woman, her four dependent children, and another family into a shack of four rooms. All together, there were 16 persons, men, women and children, living under one roof and in four rooms. At night, 12 slept in one room, lying on the floor and covered with whatever they could find.

Today I received word that the houses on Princess Street are beginning to have their roofs taken off, which means that by the time this goes to press all those people living in that row of houses (among them being a child with a broken neck), will be entirely homeless, without even the shelter usually given to animals. The S. P. C. A. would not allow a stray dog or cat to be out in the weather such as we are now having, yet Alexandrians are content to allow human beings to be treated worse than animals.

It seems to me that the Housing Authority should have had foresight enough to have investigated and made a survey of the territory and have ascertained whether there were enough places for these people to move before forcing them from the refuges they were then occupying.

I simply cannot understand how such a situation could have been calmly accepted and allowed to exist in a community supposedly inhabited by intelligent, educated, humane persons.

To Confess And Resolve

Confession is good for the soul. God knows that America's soul is being sorely tried just now. Let us confess that our country has made ten grave, perhaps fatal, mistakes in the last 20 years in international affairs:

1. When we won the war and then backed out of the establishment and maintenance of world order.

2. When we promulgated the Kellogg Pact without providing any force to make it work or any penalty for its nonobservance.

3. When we would not support economic pressure on Japan by the members of the league when she broke her treaty pledges to them and to us and started the breakdown of the machinery so newly erected to maintain world peace.

4. When we supplied Japan with everything she needed to invade China.

5. When we supplied Italy with the oil she needed to crush Ethiopia.

6. When we failed to distinguish between the aggressor nations and their victims by enacting our impossible neutrality and embargo laws.

7. When we made it plain to Hitler that we would not interfere in any way with his destruction of the European democracies.

8. When we first tried to isolate ourselves from the rest of the world and when it was apparent that that was impossible we tried to establish the Western Hemisphere as a social and economic unit.

9. When we failed to realize that the nations of this world are inextricably bound together by economic forces, and the speed of travel and communications has made the world a unit infinitely smaller than our own Nation was when it began.

10. When we failed to learn our lesson from the fall of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France.

Therefore let us resolve to make amends for our mistakes, at the eleventh hour, before it is too late, by:

1. Giving our resources of materials, money, and men if need be, without any reservations to England, to Greece and to China to stop and defeat the growing power of the aggressor governments. For if they win, our own American democracy is doomed.

2. Taking the lead in establishing and maintaining a world order based on law and justice which all nations may join and support.

In Defense Of California

I have just read Edwin Owsley's letter about his difficulties in getting into California. The search of his belongings at the border may have seemed unnecessary. But by California's vigilance the dreaded Mediterranean fly has been kept out of one State. There are many people without conscience who try to smuggle plants and fruit into California, you know. An orange is very easily hidden, therefore the careful search. Mr. Owsley's mention of the bandits in California sounds as though he had lived there in the fifties. I did not know that we had anything as exciting as bandits left in the State.

I have lived all my life in San Francisco and have often driven into California from a neighboring State without feeling abused when our car was searched.

The Post Impressionist

South Of The Border

Mexico is far away, and very, very hard to get to, but please some day go to Mexico. From Washington and back again it is almost 6,000 miles by automobile. It is a long trip, and to make it in your two weeks' vacation means endless hours of driving, up before daybreak, to bed after dark. But with the end of the day six or seven hundred miles lie behind you, and Mexico, beautiful Mexico is a little closer.

Through the pines of North and South Carolina, the dusty winding roads of Georgia, the lonely Alabama hills, on and on through Mississippi, along its Gulf Coast highway, through Louisiana and the bayous, through Texas and cactus, flatlands and oil wells. Finally, Laredo, the port of entry, just across the Rio Grande. It's loud and blaring in Laredo and in New Laredo, but it's Mexican, and it is there that your car is inspected by the Mexican soldiers. All luggage is examined while Mexican mamas and their children gather around. They enjoy the inspection as much as do the inspectors. Passports are collected, the lazy Rio Grande flows by, the parrots scream.

After Laredo, Monterrey is the first large city, 140 miles away, over the beautiful new Pan American highway, a highway that is all that man with his scientific knowledge of road-building can perfect.

The road is modern; so are parts of Mexico. Yet it looks and is centuries and centuries old. It is amazingly Indian, not Mexican, not Spanish, but almost entirely Indian, descendants of the Aztecs and the Toltecs. And if Cortez could revisit the land as he did so many years ago, he would find his Indians little changed. Their houses are tiny thatched huts, one room, mud floors, a candle burning, and a parrot by the doorway. These millions of Indians are everywhere—in the towns, the mountains, all over Mexico, living almost exactly as they did 500 years ago. They are short and dark, straight-haired and slanty-eyed; and they work hard, all of them, even the tiny children. They have made the beautiful wares you see in the shops—the pottery, the glassware, and the baskets, and the shoes, and the intricately embroidered blouses. For the most part, however, these Indians are farmers. They plant the mountains—the tops of the mountains, where moisture conditions are better. You see corn growing 8,000 feet away, up on the summit; and sugar cane, up a mountain so steep the farmer must rope himself to a tree while he plants the seed.

Market day is interesting. Then the Indians come to their little towns to buy, trade, or sell. The men are dressed in white shirts and trousers, legs rolled up, and on their heads the inevitable sombrero, over the shoulders, their serape. The women wear full, bright colored skirts, no shoes, and a long shawl over their heads. The baby is held to the mother's bosom by her shawl, while the larger child is carried on her back.

And then at last when you feel that Mexico is nothing more than thatch and mud and Indian, you come to Monterrey, a city of high walls with hand-wrought iron grille windows and doorways, and a large hotel where the manager sits reading the latest magazine while he sips coca-cola, a slightly sweeter drink than ours, for it is bottled there and Mexicans like it sweet.

Over a hundred thousand people live in sixteenth century Monterrey—Indians, Mexicans, Spaniards, Americans—and mingling with them on the streets and pavements are their horses and burros, their cows and their dogs. Guitars, girls, gayety. It is all there, plus the cathedral and the casino.

But you go to Linares to sleep that night, for somehow Monterrey seems too crowded and noisy after the peaceful mountain villages through which you've driven so many miles. Here in this strange, exotic, little, thatched village, among towering palms and poinsettias, is a semicircular group of tile and clay houses—the Chester Courts. An Englishman greets you, a caged mocking bird flutters, and a chained fox paces stealthily behind a palm tree. After you have registered, an Indian woman, shawled and barefooted, brings your dinner—carrots, beets, apple pie, and venison and, though it is late, the night is warm and fragrant and tropical.

Perhaps to get an early start on the day's trip you will leave Linares before sunup, while the moon and the million stars yet shine. It is a strange, weird ride, for the road is a corral of burros, cows and horses. They sleep on the road, the natives explain, because the surrounding forests are filled with wild animals—pumas, bears, ocelots, wild dogs.

And then, in the wild, warm, sweet night, among all the sleeping little burros, high on a hill, stands a great cathedral, white, lonely, and old, and very beautiful. A lamp burns somewhere in the tower, casting giant, silent, flickering shadows. A gentle wind blows, the stars gleam brightly, and you are very, very far from all that is home and modern and American. I think you are truly glad for the sun to rise. Perhaps it is your first visit to the tropics, so with the sun some familiarity comes. Green parrots fly dizzily from palm tree to palm tree; wild morning glories and orchids grow side by side, and bamboo reaches 10 and 20 feet into the air.

It is a shifting scene along the highway—miles of cactus, pines, palms. More little towns—Cinidad, Victoria, Valles, Tamazunchale. Over mountains 10,000 feet high, through fogs that force you to drive through dense, white clouds, but a marvelous sight greets you when finally the clouds break and disappear, for at last, 80 miles ahead, glisten two mighty volcanoes. Old Popo gleams brightest, and Mexico City is finally reached.

Ancient and modern, ugly and beautiful—Mexico City! A million people throng its streets. It is one of the gayest cities in the world, and you have come a long, long way.

Please, some day, go to Mexico.

PEGGY GILMORE.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Mr. Robey's Report

THE EXCERPTS published by the New York Times on February 22 from Mr. Ralph Robey's report on 600 school textbooks, prepared originally for the National Association of Manufacturers, do not seem to me to substantiate the implicit charge that the textbooks are "derogatory of the American form of government." They seem to me rather to indicate that there is still a free, inquiring, critical mind in this country and among its textbook writers.

THOMPSON

Certainly business practices come in for a good deal of criticism. Why shouldn't they? The question is not whether the textbooks criticize business practices but whether their criticisms are well founded and well argued. I think Mr. Feier's description of the technique of advertising as quoted in the Times from his "Elements of Economics" is largely correct. And with the world in a full state of revolution it is certainly necessary to inquire into the causes and raise the question of whether we use wealth, money and credit as productively for society as we could.

Many of the economic views expressed in these quoted textbooks are highly conservative, compared to the social and economic views of certain people who have the ear of the National Association of Manufacturers. And—from the other side—although I am no partisan of Harold Rugg, I should certainly prefer to learn social sciences from him rather than from, for instance, Mr. George Sokolsky. For I fear that Mr. George Sokolsky's views would, if put into practice, lead us straight into a far more revolutionary condition of affairs than Mr. Rugg's ever will.

THESE REMARKS do not, however, constitute an indorsement of the present status of our education. I believe that the American form of government, American law, business enterprise, the press, the trades unions—and even columnists—are all open to criticism. So, too, are the universities and the textbook writers. Free peoples live and grow by a continual evolutionary process.

MY OWN criticism of our education is that we have too many textbooks, too many second and third hand ideas, too little rigorous intellectual discipline and too much information about too many things wholly outside the frame of any standards or any points of reference.

A generation ago we taught American history in an oleographic melodramatic way: Every historical figure was a hero, this was God's country and just about whatever was was right. The reaction to this has been extreme.

An age of debunking came in, and the debunkers have swept the whole stage in the so-called social "sciences."

These debunkers are as often oblique with the truth as the adorers were before them. And characteristic of our education is that criticism is not made in reference to any principles, and since it is too little accompanied by attention to the accumulation of human wisdom, it leaves the student in a bleak void, or inculcates in him a know-it-all air of general skepticism.

I DO NOT MIND that students read Karl Marx—if they have the intellectual vigor to do so. But they don't. They read John Strachey's popularizations of Marx. And Mr. Strachey is another bright boy with a bright pen whose works have added nothing to Marx, but detracted a good deal. Our "economics" students discuss glibly about the end of laissez faire, via some textbook on the subject, but have never in their lives read Adam Smith's "The Wealth of Nations"—from which they might have learned that the man whom they are told was the parent of laissez faire never unqualifiedly believed in it either.

THEY READ Mr. Beard—and Mr. Rugg—on the history of the Constitution, but I have never yet met a college student who had read more than two or three of the Federalist Papers.

Every last mother's son of them has definite and dogmatic opinions about the last war, gained from popular writers on the subject, among them Mr. Walter Millis, and almost all of them view the present struggle in the world as though it were a mere duplication of the last struggle. Actually, they know nothing whatsoever about even the last one. They have never read the distinguished and documented histories, whether from German sources, or whether from English. They have seldom read the papers of Woodrow Wilson, or "The New Freedom."

And, similarly, though they know all about John Chamberlain's concept of the democratic state as a "limited racket," they have read almost no Machiavelli—who is better, and even more interesting.

They don't read De Tocqueville, they don't read Bryce, they do read the popularizers, who also perhaps have read neither De Tocqueville nor Bryce.

THERE IS AN almost complete neglect in our colleges of all the branches of philosophy, especially of the philosophy of politics. This gives its ephermeral and superficial nature to the thought of most of our "educated" youth. They know a great, great deal, about a great, great many things. But their education has given them neither a personal nor a social philosophy. They haven't any point in their minds from which they look about them and to which they refer what they see. Most of our modern thinking has this febrile quality of intellectuality without foundations; of brilliance without intelligence, of knowledge without sense.

THIS IS WHAT makes it so easy for them to be liberals one moment and "progressives" the next, and to sail from either point into an apologia for fascism or for communism. The end of it all is nihilism. They don't know what they believe in, and, indeed, they are encouraged to think that to believe in anything at all is somehow "narrow-minded," as though the mind were something indiscriminately open to every plausible idea and was not an organ for constant precise selection, choice, association, synthesis.

THEY ARE ASKED, or ask themselves, every question except a few of the really important ones, such as "What, in the light of history, have been happy and creative societies?" Indeed, contempt for the past, characteristic of modern life, must be the result of education, although knowledge of the past and respect for its accumulations are all that we have—plus imagination—to help us chart any sort of future.

Tell a college student that he can learn more regarding the real nature of fascism and its causes from Aristotle than he can from most modern writers on the theme and he gapes in astonishment, for that great, clear, free mind lived a couple of thousand years ago before there were streamlined trains, and thus inferentially has nothing to say to the human mind and soul about the essentials, in content and structure, of a good society.

Our students admire Lincoln because they have been taught that he sought to make a larger and more social democracy, which is correct, but they do not drink at the same spring from which Lincoln drank—namely the Bible, from the wisdom of the great prophets and the inspired gospels.

The hatred and distrust of intellectuals by the common people, which is frighteningly characteristic of our times, probably has its roots in the fact that though the intellectuals know more about how people live in terms of calories, units of living space and forms of enterprise than their forbears did, they know a lot less about people as just people.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynd's "Middletown" is probably a completely "accurate" study of Muncie, Ind. But just the same, it isn't at all like Muncie, Ind. It isn't nearly as like Muncie, Ind., as Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street is. Because human beings are simply not measurable in any really important way by the yardsticks used by the Lynds. It's a fine piece of work and worthy of reading, provided that the reader knows this.

Point Of Debate

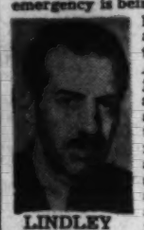
By Ernest K. Lindley

Antitrust Laws

ONE OF THE sorest controversies between business groups concerned with defense and New Dealers is enforcement of the antitrust laws.

Many businessmen have been saying for months that the defense program requires relief from the antitrust laws. A drive for relief by Congressional action has been gathering force.

Thurman Arnold and his Antitrust Division are strongly opposed to permitting any relief by law. They frankly fear that the emergency is being used to breach permanently the antitrust restrictions, into which Arnold has injected new strength. They assert, moreover, that amendments for that purpose are unnecessary, since Arnold has agreed to accept, as not in violation of the antitrust laws, temporary agreements which the Army, the Navy, or the Office of Production Management certifies are necessary for defense.



LINDLEY

Clearly, production for national defense needs cooperation between the Government and entire industries. There must be agreements about the allocation of orders and subcontracting, and a host of related matters.

When the productive capacity of whole industries is strained by defense requirements, prices tend to go up: in fact, to shoot up. In some instances the simplest way to keep them down is by industry-wide agreements.

FROM THE OUTSET of the defense effort last summer until the present time, informal understandings with producers have been used to keep prices within reason. This method was resorted to by Leon Henderson, NDAC commissioner in charge of price-watching. It worked well in a number of cases, perhaps because the producers understood that if this scheme did not work, more severe methods would be resorted to.

Henderson was forced to go farther in a few cases, especially steel scrap and lumber. A stern public warning was enough for steel scrap. For lumber, public warnings were backed by a hint that the Government would commandeer lumber for Army construction purposes if sufficient quantities were not offered at fair prices.

But the demands of defense have now reached the point where in many industries more formal arrangements seem necessary. These must include, in many cases, agreements concerning maximum prices. Yet the trade associations of these industries cannot work out such agreements without violating the antitrust laws. In some cases they are specifically bound by consent decrees not to get together to discuss prices.

Arnold scoffs at the plea that the antitrust laws bar agreements of this kind. He says they were never intended to prevent keeping prices down. He has renewed several times his offer to accept any agreement publicly certified as necessary or desirable by the Army, the Navy, or the OPM.

Arnold's offer is regarded suspiciously by business groups. They remember what happened after the NRA, when the Government prosecuted practices which were in effect extensions of those approved under the NRA. They assert that under existing decisions, neither Arnold nor any other member of the executive branch can relieve them of the hazard of prosecution.

The reply from Arnold's side is that whatever agreements are sanctioned should be for the purpose of defense only. His aim is to promote a repetition of the aftermath of NRA: when trade associations tried to carry forward without Government approval practices which violated the antitrust laws.

UNQUESTIONABLY, the antitrust laws, as enforced by Arnold, are extremely distasteful to many businessmen. They want to break through the barriers he has erected, and the plea of national defense is a powerful battering ram. Certainly there are other motives than patriotism behind the drive against the antitrust laws, and against Arnold in particular.

The fact remains that Arnold has not been able to brush away the doubts of responsible men within the OPM, whose sole or primary interest is in defense production and the sound management of the national economy during the strain of an emergency.

But there are other ways of handling the problem—without relying on Arnold's formula or having the antitrust laws amended. This was demonstrated recently when Leon Henderson's division fixed maximum prices for second-hand machine tools industry and various users of their products. Then the maximum price was fixed by a Government directive.

As a slight variation, industry-wide agreements can be obtained by the separate pledges of individual producers to the Government. This, in substance, would be only a formal application of the method which Henderson began to adopt last summer. The Government takes full final responsibility, so that there is no breach of the antitrust laws.

This is the line of action which seems most likely to get results without alarming either industry or the defenders of the antitrust laws and thus continuing a feud which is of no help to defense.

Bullitt Warns Nation

Urges Emergency To Speed Arms

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 27.—William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, tonight urged an immediate national emergency, if necessary, to speed up production of war materials for the anti-Axis nations and warned that Germany will dominate the world unless defeated.

He told the Overseas Press Club that there can be no "peace without victory" in the present conflict, and that the world will be directed either from Berlin or from London and Washington when hostilities cease.

He said that Josef Stalin is "quaking in his Kremlin, and is too weak, morally and physically, to win even a jackal's victory over corpses."

"If the British win, there will be a chance—I do not say a certainty, but a chance—that the world for the first time in human history may be organized for peace," he said. "If this war should end with dominant air power and dominant sea power in the hands of the United States and Great Britain, it might be possible to organize peace for all nations on a basis of fair play and Christian decency."

He said the British, since the fall of France, "have done far better than any man had reason to believe they would be able to do," but said the United States has "done worse than any man had reason to expect" in providing war materials for its own defense and to aid Britain, China and Greece.

"IF WE WERE fully awake to the danger that threatens us," he declared, "we should at this hour be producing every element of defense that we need, and every implement of defense that the British, the Chinese and the Greeks, need, with as great speed as though we were in war.

"We are doing nothing of the kind. We are making just the effort that it is not troublesome to make. . . .

"If we can not now get into production at war speed without the declaration of a national emergency, I, for one, favor the immediate declaration of a national emergency."

Bullitt's speech was broadcast nationally by the Mutual network.

Warning that loss of the British fleet was "almost certain" to be followed by an invasion of this hemisphere by the combined force of the totalitarian powers, Bullitt declared that the United States is not prepared to meet that attack.

"If the Nazis should control Africa and Europe and the Japanese control Asia and Australasia," he continued, "we would be cut off from trade with so great a portion of the earth that the standard of living of every American from the richest to the poorest would fall disastrously.

"We should have to turn the United States into an armed camp with military discipline in every phase of life. Even that might not be enough to preserve our independence."

TO CHARGES of nonintervention-ists that the Administration's program of aid to the anti-Axis nations was dictatorial and a war-making policy, Bullitt said:

"We know that our country is not producing weapons of defense fast enough and that we are not supplying weapons in sufficient quantities to the British, the Chinese and the Greeks. Let those who will call us warmongers. We speak the truth because we love our country and we want our Nation to save itself from destruction."

Bullitt said that news gathered by reporters overseas in the last few years has been "astonishing both in volume and in quality," then added:

"I do not assert that no untruth and no foreign propaganda has come over the wires from abroad to American newspapers; but my experience has convinced me that false reports and propaganda have come in nearly every case from correspondents who, although they are hired by American newspapers or agencies, are not Americans.

"I know that one of the greatest elements of strength in our national life is the fact that no one can buy an American newspaperman."

Text of Roosevelt's Speech To Motion-Picture Industry

Following is a partial text of President Roosevelt's radio speech last night in connection with the thirteenth annual awards dinner of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences at Hollywood:

I am happy to greet the motion picture industry of America, whose representatives are gathered from far and near for annual awards dinner of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

In these days of anxiety and world peril our hearts and minds and all of our energies are directed toward one objective. That objective is the strengthening of our national defense . . .

The American motion picture as a national and international force is a phenomenon of our own generation. Within living memory we have seen it born and grow up into full maturity. We have seen the American motion pictures become foremost in the world. We have seen it reflect our civilization throughout the rest of the world—the aims and aspirations and ideals of a free people and of freedom.

That is the real reason that some governments do not want our American films exhibited in their countries. Dictators—those who enforce the totalitarian form of government—think it is a dangerous thing for their unfortunate peoples to know that in our democracy officers of the government are the servants, never the masters of the people.

IN ALL THAT I have said on that all important subject through many months past I have emphasized that in the assault on the democratic form of government which imperils world civilization today, our problem of national defense has become one of defending the entire Western Hemisphere—all three of the Americas—North, Central and South. We can no longer consider our own problem of defense as a separate interest. . . .

An all important factor in hemispheric defense is the lend-lease bill, whose early enactment by the Congress we confidently anticipate. It is a pleasure here and now to acknowledge the great service which the newsreels have performed in acquainting the public with all of the implications of this measure . . .

In carrying on this program of advancing the spirit of inter-American solidarity and continental defense our Government has established machinery to coordinate our growing commercial and cultural relations with the American Republics. Our Government has invited you to do your share of the job of interpreting the people of the Western Hemisphere to one another. And all of us in all the 21 American Republics are grateful that your response is so immediate and so wholehearted.

I do not minimize the importance of the motion picture industry as the most popular medium of mass entertainment. But tonight I want to place the chief emphasis on the service you can render in promoting solidarity among all the people of the Americas.

For all this and for your splendid cooperation with all who are directing the expansion of our defense forces, I am glad to thank you. In the weeks and months that lie ahead, we in Washington know we shall have your continued aid and support.

Fair Enough

Freedom Of The Press

NOW THAT everyone else has said a little say about President Roosevelt's recent chiding of the newspaper publishers for printing military information received from statesmen who may have violated a seal of confidence, I will neatly dispose of the matter as follows:

Newspaper publishers are not censors but editors, and, with the exception of a few brash adventurers, there is no more patriotic group of men in the country, nor any group with a stronger motive for preserving the American Nation as a republic, under capitalism, which is the only system that tolerates and affords a living for a free press.

PEGLER

The publishers are, as a group, no less wise or honest than the members of the two professions which President Roosevelt himself has adorned, namely, the law, in which he operated as a Wall Street attorney, and politics, in which he collaborated with Hague of Jersey City, Kelly of Chicago, Pendergast of Kansas City and the political heirs of Huey P. Long in Louisiana.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has consistently indicated hostility to the American kind of press, while utilizing it for his political purposes, and the persistency of his campaign to discredit this kind of press naturally prompts consideration of the alternative.

We all know in our business that, in numbers, the American daily press is declining as a consequence of rising costs, including taxes and the slow-down movement in the mechanical trades, and the loss of advertising revenue to the radio.

The radio is subject to strict Government control and may be effectively pressed to discourse propaganda platters for the Administration, but has no editorial character and never, of its own initiative, would dare expose Jimmy Roosevelt's insurance connections or scrutinize Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's political activities.

Editorially, radio is a blank and a servile thing which in foreign lands has been used to enslave people, whereas even the worst enemies of the American press unwittingly give the publishers credit for great moral and financial courage when they denounce it for opposing the Roosevelt Administration. For certainly, if the press were servile, the publishers would have tried to placate the New Deal, knowing its great power and vindictiveness, instead of antagonizing it.

At this moment, too, some publishers, right or wrong, are taking a great risk in opposing the dictatorial bill, whose best friends admit that it is a dictatorship bill, because they are being denounced as appeasers and an American Cliveden set, and this is dangerous propaganda against them in communities where the Administration is strong.

The Administration can, and will not hesitate to throw its support to papers which support the bill by methods more subtle than you could imagine, and a good, patriotic, ethical publisher may be placed under a boycott for the attitude which, in the long run, may prove to have been highly patriotic.

BUT THE ONLY alternative to the free American press is the subsidized press, which never is honest, as may be observed at a glance in the radical papers that live on secret contributions from mysterious sources, or the Hitler-Stalin-Mussolini-Franco kind of press, which suppresses all contrary opinion and all news unfavorable to the regime. There is no other alternative to the American kind of press which

Years Of The Locust

By Barnet Nover

We Could Have Ordered It Better

ON JUNE 18, 1919, Porter J. McCumber, Republican of North Dakota, arose in the Senate to voice a prophetic warning to his fellow members, particularly those on his side of the chamber. Two years had passed since the United States had intervened in the World War on the side of the Allies, and by that action had made victory certain. The question before the Senate and before the people of the United States was what to do with that victory.

NOVER

Was it to be regarded as an end in itself, permitting this Nation to go back to its accustomed ways, "the world forgetting, by the world forgot?" Or was the victory achieved at such great cost in blood and treasure to serve as the basis of a new and happier world order in which the spirit of aggression that had been responsible for four years of intense misery would somehow be chained through the united effort of all peace-loving nations.

Already the retreat from the idealism magnificently expounded by Woodrow Wilson had begun. It was also to prove a retreat from reality. But what was later to prove a tide was, in June, 1919, still only a trickle.

IT WAS in this setting that Senator McCumber arose to plead with the Lodges and Borahs and Brandegees and Philander Knoxes to take a long view.

"And I say candidly, Senators," he warned "that you may defeat the treaty, this League of Nations; you may scatter abroad criticisms that are unjust or baseless; you may appeal to a national pride and to the selfish side of our natures and thereby destroy at this time the hope that has been in the heart of every thinking, feeling, loving human being for centuries that the time would come when the same law which governs the rights of individuals would be applied to shield the lives of nations. But as surely as this is defeated and the world suffers another such calamity, deeper than the hatred of the enemy will be the hatred toward the statesmen of the world who have failed in their great opportunity to league together to shield the poor, innocent human beings from such sufferings and calamities as have been visited upon them because there is no law to check a great, powerful nation from criminal aggression."

WITHOUT the weight which the United States had thrown into the scales in 1917 and 1918 the victory could not have been won. Without the weight which the United States could have thrown but did not throw into the scales in the years following 1918 the peace of the world perforce remained in precarious balance capable of being upset by the aggressors of Europe and Asia.

The question before the United States in June, 1919, was not basically a question whether we should or should not join the League of Nations, then emerging from the Paris peace conference. That issue merely gave point to the broader question of what our role in world affairs was to be. Presumably we could have stayed out of the League and yet played a decisive part in the determination of the course of events by following the dictates of power politics. We could have made alliances with individual nations or preserved the alliance we had, in effect, joined when we intervened in the war. But what happened was that we neither joined the League nor operated independently as a great power. The result was confusion and ultimately disaster.

The United States had come to man's estate. But those who had the final say in the "Great Debate" of 1919-1920 insisted that by an act of will we could prolong the carefree life of infancy. They fought vehemently against having our isolationist dolls taken away from us. And while the political progeny of the Irreconcilables of 1919 have greatly diminished in numbers they have lost none of the breed's violence. Like their forbears, they cry "Peace! Peace!" when there is no peace.

AT VARIOUS stages in the years following 1919 and 1920 the United States could have reversed the stand then taken and played a truly constructive part in the preservation of peace. A vote cast by the American member of the Reparations Commission in 1922 could have prevented the Ruhr occupation. It was not cast. We could have done much to strengthen the League which, despite our abstention, lived and developed and did much good. We were afraid to do so. We could have made it clear to the potential aggressors that the United States would do everything possible to aid their victims. We did nothing of the kind until long after the aggressors had taken to the war path. We sought instead to achieve peace by incantation—by speeches and homilies and Kellogg Pacts. When the structure of international society began to be assaulted by the aggressors we hastily built ourselves what was assumed to be a bomb-proof shelter in the form of a neutrality act. It was the greatest fraud of all.

These 20-odd years have been years which the locusts have eaten. We made about every mistake in the calendar. But the greatest mistake was that in a dynamic world the United States could be static, that in a turbulent world this Nation could achieve peace by contemplating its navel. We are discovering to our sorrow and alarm that there is no Nirvana through negation. And some there are who haven't learned that lesson yet.

President Roosevelt so heartily dislikes.

So in advocating and defending, as I do, the American kind of press I am mindful of not only my job and the interests of the owners but of the freedom which must and always does vanish when conditions arise which finally make it impossible for the press to continue as a private enterprise. The day the privately owned press disappears you will goosestep and pretend, at least, to like it or vanish into a concentration camp.

Rickenbacker Near Death

Capt. Edward V. "Eddie" Rickenbacker cut out a career in the face of death.

He laughed in the face of death as he smashed records on automobile racing tracks all over America. He took his destiny and a small part of the Nation's into his hands when, over the battlefields of France, he sat at the controls of a French fighter and with his machine guns cut down 26 German planes.

For the President of Eastern Air Lines and ace of American World War aces, his crash with one of his own company's planes was just another in a long series of brushes with eternity.

Several times in his younger days he eliminated himself from an auto race by somersaulting through a fence. Once, in France, he brought down a German plane through the expedient of colliding with it in midair. On another occasion his ship was crippled and he crashed behind his own lines.

To his bedside in an Atlanta hospital last night rushed his wife, the former Adelaide F. Durant, from Charlotte, N. C., and his two sons, David, 16, and William, 13, from Asheville, N. C., where they are attending school.

Doctors gave him slightly better than an even chance to recover.

Always — with yesterday's possible exception—Rickenbacker has emerged with his body unscarred. Always his courage has come through undaunted.

He still had his courage yesterday. As he lay in excruciating pain, beneath tons of plane wreckage and with the ship's fuel tanks dripping, he remembered to cry:

"Don't strike a match—don't strike a match—there's gasoline all around here."

Later, after a harrowing, pain-wracked trip by stretcher and ambulance to the hospital, he spoke to Dr. Louis D. Newton. "I am bruised but not broken in spirit," he said.

Like the typical Horatio Alger hero, Edward Vernon Rickenbacker quit school when he was 12 to care for his widowed mother and sister. He went to work first in his native Columbus, Ohio, in a glass factory at $3.50 a week for a 12-hour night.

From 1910 to 1916 Rickenbacker was one of the Nation's top racing drivers. In 1914, he drove a Blitzen Blenz on the sands at Daytona Beach at 134 miles an hour, then a world record.

He was in England when America entered the World War. Returning to this country, he sought permission to organize a flying unit of racing drivers, but was turned down. Thereupon he enlisted and became chauffeur in France for Gen. Pershing.

Rickenbacker's heart, however, was set on becoming a war pilot. He importuned Pershing at every opportunity to transfer him to the Air Corps. Finally Pershing consented with this comment on the nature of Rickenbacker's driving: "If you are as dangerous to the Germans as you have been to me, you ought to be an ace within a week."

After the war, Rickenbacker went into the automobile business in his own name, but the venture failed. He later became vice president and sales manager of the LaSalle division of Cadillac, and, in 1935, general manager of Eastern Air Lines.

Crash Kills Rep. Byron

Representative William Devereux Byron lost his life in the airplane crash near Atlanta while flying to a vacation as a guest of Ambassador Josephus Daniels in Mexico City.

He was to have joined Mrs. Byron, who has been in New Orleans, and take her on the trip to Mexico.

All of yesterday, his office phones here brought messages of condolence for the family, which resides at 2310 Connecticut Avenue. The House of Representatives, where Mr. Byron had served as a Democrat with strong New Deal leanings since 1938, was formally notified of the death yesterday morning by Representative Thomas D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, and adjourned out of respect.

Mr. Byron's body was identified at a mortician's establishment at Atlanta yesterday by a friend, L. C. Mabley, of Birmingham, Ala. He said he had known Mr. Byron in Maryland and there was no doubt of identification, the Associated Press reported. Mabley telephoned the Representative's office.

Flying and music were Mr. Byron's hobbies. His "five-man" string band consisted of himself and his four sons, William D., jr., 16; James, 13; Goodloe, 11, and David, 8. He had hopes that his other son, Louis, 3, would be musical, too.

Flying had attracted him since World War days, when he enlisted as a private in the Aviation Corps later being commissioned a first lieutenant and serving as instructor in flying and aerial gunnery.

Death terminated a career in politics which he began as Mayor of Williamsport, Md., his home city, in 1926. A special election must be called for the naming of his successor in the Sixth Maryland District.

Mr. Byron was reelected to the House last fall in a closely fought contest with the Republican nominee, Walter Johnson, the former big league pitching ace.

He was born in Danville, Va., May 15, 1895, the son of Col. Joseph C. and Mrs. Jane Wilson Byron; attended the public schools there and later Phillips Exeter Academy and Pratt Institute. He was sent to the Maryland Senate from Washington County in 1930, serving there four years; was a member of the Maryland Roads Commission, 1934-35, and went to Congress in 1938 with a victory over Charles P. Stewart, Republican, succeeding David J. Lewis as the Sixth District Representative.

Mr. Byron had become an outstanding member of the House Military Affairs Committee. He had worked especially since events of last May to speed defense preparations in Maryland, particularly the development of airports at Cumberland and Frederick. He also urged coordinated action to care for the many problems of housing.

At Williamsport he operated the family leather business, comprising the town's largest industry; was president of the Washington County National Bank and vice president of the Hagerstown Herald-Mail Publishing Co.

Gov. O'Conor, of Maryland, said he "was shocked beyond words" at the news of Mr. Byron's death. "Every Marylander will join with me, I know, in extending to Mrs. Byron our heartfelt condolences," he stated.

David Byron, of Washington, brother, was to leave late yesterday for Atlanta to arrange for bringing the body here. He was affiliated with the Masons and the Elks. His five sons were in Washington when word of the plane crash reached here. Mrs. Byron, the former Miss Katherine Edgar, was said to have left New Orleans immediately for Atlanta on receiving word of her husband's death.

Right Flour An Aid to Fine Baking

Cold Shortening Heads List of Tips On Preparation Of Flakier Pies

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

A YOUNG friend of mine who is to be married soon came to me recently for some help in cookery. She was especially interested in knowing how to make hot breads and flaky pies. George, the boy she is going to marry, loves hot breads and thinks that pie is the dessert of all desserts.

Martha Ellyn

I gave her a lesson in my kitchen on the basic principles of baking. Running her eye over the contents of my food cabinet she remarked, "I notice you have two kinds of flour. Is that really necessary?"

"Perhaps not exactly necessary," I answered. "The kinds of flour you need depend upon the uses to which you put flour, and also upon the results you demand. I have two types on hand because I make biscuits, pies, dredge cutlets and want to get the best possible results.

She was bewildered for a moment and sighed, saying, "I always thought flour was just flour." So it has occurred to me other prospective brides and women who have not gone into cooking thoroughly may be under the same impression as the prospective bride.

Produce Fluffier Texture

Experienced homemakers have proved to themselves that the new cake flours produce fluffier, finer-textured cakes and that the all-purpose (family) flours are thoroughly satisfactory for thickening, dredging, binding and general baking.

Marian, of course, wanted to know the reason why. The answer is a simple word—GLUTEN. Just as viscosity is the heroine as concerns eggs, so gluten is the important thing about flour. I demonstrated to her the difference between all-purpose flour and cake flour, by making a ball of dough of each, to show her what the gluten of flour looks like. I made a stiff ball of dough from about one-half cup of flour, and allowed it to stand for an hour in cold water. Next I put it in a fine sieve and run cold water over it kneading it gently all the time. After a little while the starchy part of the flour washed away completely and the water run clear. What remained in the sieve after the washing process was gluten. I made a ball of dough from both cake and all-purpose flour. The gluten from the all-purpose flour was relatively large in quantity and substantial in quality. It could be collected easily with the fingers and kneaded into a ball which was as elastic as rubber. The gluten from the cake flour was small in quantity, delicate and fragile in quality and there was no difficulty in gathering it up and making it stick together. A solid, substantial article like bread needs a substantial type of gluten to hold the dough together and to give it shape during the long process of mixing and kneading, rising and baking.

Strong Gluten Not Needed

A very light product such as cake which is quickly mixed, raised by leavening agent such as baking powder, soda or beaten egg whites, then popped into the oven at once for a rapid baking does not need a strong gluten.

Marian was especially interested in knowing about making pies. There are a number of things to be remembered if you want to make a delicately flavored and meltingly tender apple, cherry, lemon pie, or other kinds of pies.

Pastry Making Hints

Hot water pastries are crumbly; pastry made with cold shortening and cold water are flaky. Pastry is especially flaky if the cold shortening is cut into the flour only until the lumps are the size of a pea.

Pastry is tender if the dough is handled little and rolled lightly. The toughness caused by overhandling is most often caused by using too much water. Add the water a few drops at a time, tossing the mixture with a fork until the flour barely holds together.

A mixture of shortening, salt and flour may be kept in the refrigerator ready for the addition of water when there's a pie to be made. Another time saver is to mix pie dough, form into a ball, cover with wax paper and chill in refrigerator until needed. Since chilling helps make pastry flaky, place pastry-lined pans in the refrigerator while the filling is being prepared.

Pie pans need not be greased since the shortening in pastry prevents sticking. Always ease pastry into the pan without stretching. Make a single baked crust by baking pastry over the back of the pie pan, and be sure to prick the pastry with a fork to let the steam escape.

Cheese Improves Pastry

I also told this prospective bride about self-rising flour that is on the market that may be used wherever plain flour is used, except in yeast breads. The only difference is that since self-rising flour already contains leavening and salt, these ingredients are omitted from the recipe. Here is a recipe that I gave her which she reported gave excellent results:

Quick Apple Strudle—Sift 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, and 2 tablespoons sugar together. Cut in 4 tablespoons shortening and add 2-3 to 3-4 cup milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on floured board and knead gently. Roll out ¼ inch thick. Brush with melted butter, cover with chopped apple, using about 3 cups apple. Sprinkle sugar and cinnamon over the apple. Roll jelly-roll fashion and form into a semi-circle on a greased baking sheet. Bake in moderately hot oven, 425 degrees, for 20 to 25 minutes. While warm frost with white frosting made by beating confectioners sugar with a little hot water until smooth and flavor with vanilla extract. Sprinkle with chopped nuts over frosting.

Roll Your Own

Romances have flowered on the flaky delicacy of delicious pies and tender biscuits. The bride who masters the rules of baking will never want for admirers. Here the girl is making a two-crust pie, no doubt a flavorsome apple pie.

'Gay Paree' Is Big Thrill To Young Nazis

This is the fifth of a series of six stories written by Lynn Heinzerling and Edwin Shanke, just back from Germany.

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 27.—Germany may face the same problem which Americans were singing about during the World War: "How You Going to Keep 'Em Down on the Farm After They've Seen Paree?"

Paris is still gayer than Berlin, so is Copenhagen. Brussels is more subdued, but there are special dispensations for the occupying troops. Officers returning from Oslo have said the life there is very comfortable and the food plentiful.

German troops in all the occupied countries are under strict discipline. It is made clear to them by their superior officers that they are not on a vacation tour, but they are not denied all the advantages and pleasures there may be in living in a foreign country.

Thousands of German boys from the rural sections of the Reich, from Austria and Bavaria, are seeing foreign capitals for the first time, learning new ways of living and, in Paris, encountering luxuries of which they perhaps never dreamed.

The social lion of the hour in Germany is the officer or soldier returning from an occupied country on leave and bringing with him foreign delicacies and other products not obtainable in Germany.

Chocolate now is becoming scarce in all the occupied countries, but earlier it was a rare soldier who returned to the Fatherland without several boxes of candy for his relatives and friends.

"Luxuries" Brought Home

Wives and sweethearts of soldiers in Paris expected and received French lingerie and perfumes, woolen clothing and shoes. Holland supplied much coffee and tea for a while. One returning airforce officer brought a set of three dozen modern American phonograph records to Berlin. Canned fish and meats came out of Oslo.

Throughout the fall and winter, the German military command appeared to be granting leaves generously, and soldiers were on the go between Berlin and their posts in the occupied countries almost constantly. Passenger trains were filled with them, and I have seen soldiers returning to duty sleeping on the floor outside my compartment because of the crowded conditions.

At Adolf Hitler's express wish, thousands of German soldiers were taken to Paris daily and shown the architectural wonders of the city. In some cases, German photographers were sent along with them, and pictures of local boys viewing the conquered city were shown to the folks at home.

The Germans, in fact, seem to make it a point to be friendly with the French, if that is wanted, and to remain aloof if that seems the proper course. At one American bar in Paris, three German officers, who insist on speaking only English, are regular customers.

From midnight on, the Germans have Paris mostly to themselves, since no one is permitted on the streets after that hour unless he has a pass issued by the German military and French police. Many night clubs are in full blast until the early morning hours. In some of them the entertainers even sing their songs in German.

Occasionally a German, in a burst of candor, will tell you he is fed up with the whole business and wishes the war were ended. Recently in Paris, a young German officer told me he was "fed up to here with war," pointing to his neck. He said he hoped it all would be over this spring, and that he could go home.

When I asked him how he thought it would end, he said England would have to be occupied, and he added "that it will be a very difficult operation for both sides, but especially for us. The Channel water is very cold."

How Family Of Four Eats On $9 a Week

Nine dollars a week for food for a family of four—two adults and two young children, is one of the many interesting stories told in a recently released book, "How America Lives at Home," written by J. C. Furnas and the staff of Ladies Home Journal.

In this book 16 families in the great neighborhood of our democracy have been taken as representative American families. Each of them is the family next door, when you think of America as a whole. These people are real, warm and American as pumpkin pie right out of the oven. They are yourselves. And you are democracy.

The general summary of American food is expressed in the opening paragraph of the chapter, "How America Eats," written by Louella G. Shouer. It is:

"The kitchen is still, as it has been from our earliest American beginnings, the very center of our American family life. The good food created and produced there is a part of our cultural history. As a nation we like to 'eat well' and, particularly in these times, do eat better than any other nation in the world."

Eat Well on $1.28 a Day

This chapter tells how Mrs. Case, of Detroit, has just $9 a week to feed her family of four—two adults and two young children. The account of the food given the Case family is very interesting, for Mrs. Case not only fed her family for $1.28 a day, but furnished the family a good diet.

The following is Mrs. Case's basic plan for daily meals:

Breakfast—Orange juice for Mrs. Case and the two children. Mr. Case prefers to eat his orange rather than drink it. Oatmeal and milk is an everyday occurrence. The children like bran or wheat flakes sprinkled on theirs. Then there's toast and coffee for the adults and milk for the children. Once a week there's bacon and eggs.

Lunch—For the children and Mrs. Case—a filling cream soup, bread and butter, raw carrot or celery strips, sandwiches occasionally, milk and fruit. Mr. Case carries two or three sandwiches, cake and fruit to the plant in a paper sack.

Dinner—An inexpensive main dish, such as macaroni with cheese or with tomatoes and hamburger, or scalloped potatoes with bacon or frankfurters, or vegetable beef-bone soup; a green or yellow cooked vegetable; a raw vegetable or fruit salad; sometimes cottage cheese; milk; bread and butter; simple puddings and fruit desserts for the children—sometimes pie or cake for Mr. and Mrs. Case.

The above named chapter is but one of 25 interesting chapters among which are discussed all phases of American housekeeping—Fashion, Beauty and Home Decoration. Since average family life is discussed, a vivid picture is given for anyone who wants to learn about getting the most out of life for a moderate income. The publisher is Henry Holt & Co. Price, $3.

Vitamin Drink Enhances Salad

There's something about a jellied cheese salad that has great appeal. When it is made with the new vitamin cocktail juice, it takes on added appeal. Try making this salad.

Jellied Cheese Salad—Heat the vitamin cocktail juice to boiling, remove from heat, add three 3-oz. packages cream cheese and beat until thoroughly blended. Soak 2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin in ½ cup cold water for 5 minutes and then dissolve in hot mixture. Cool, but do not permit to thicken; then stir in 1 cup mayonnaise, 1 cup chopped celery, 2 tablespoons minced pimento, ¼ cup chopped green pepper and 1 tablespoon minced onion and ¼ teaspoon salt, speck pepper, and a dash of cayenne. Pour into a mold or loaf pan of 5 cup capacity, and chill until firm. Turn from mold onto a platter bordered with lettuce; or unmold, cut in slices and serve on individual beds of lettuce with dressing. Serves 6 to 8.

Why MEAT Is a "Must" for Soldiers

A modern army quartermaster says:

"A soldier needs plenty of proteins, and meat is the No. 1 protein food."

This Seal means that all statements made in this advertisement are acceptable to the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

The food elements that help men in military service to maintain physical fitness are just as vital to the civilian laborer and office worker in "the battle of life."

Meat is recognized as a great source of the highest quality proteins. Now it is coming into its own too for its B vitamins.

Not only individuals, but governments too, are recognizing the importance of these vitamins in the public well-being. For instance, vitamin B_1, a member of the vitamin B group has recently received the recognition of Great Britain: To help maintain the well-being of its people, the British government decreed that certain highly refined foods deficient in this vitamin are to be fortified with vitamin B_1.

The recent discovery of its content of B vitamins places meat on the list of basic foods important for thiamine (vitamin B_1), riboflavin (vitamin B_2) and the anti-pellagra vitamin. All are needed to maintain normal health and well-being.

Isn't it a pleasure to know that the meat we love also has sound scientific reasons for being eaten?

29th Division In 'Combat' At Ft. Meade

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Correspondent.

Fort George G. Meade, Md.—Over fields half frozen and half bog, the Twenty-ninth Division deployed yesterday in earnest simulation of combat.

Infantry regiments, broken down into squads and platoons, practiced attack over open ground and bayonet work, the three regiments of field artillery continued their standing gun drill, while drivers were taught simple maintenance and operation.

In the former, wheels, radiators and fenders were removed and replaced in the field. In the latter, drivers were sent with the big trucks down lanes marked out by stakes, turning at sharp angles and backing and filling with and without trailers.

The District's 121st Engineers, in the areas between barracks and in the field set aside for its training, built barbed wire entanglements, laid out its equipment for inspection, built camps and dismantled them and engaged in combat practice with rifles and bayonets.

It was announced that Warrant Officer Meyer Goldman, the 121st's band leader, will be judge of a Boy Scout bugling contest tomorrow in Baltimore. Scout buglers from all sections of the United States will compete.

Large numbers of officers, noncommissioned officers and men were in special schools within the camp. Other schools will be opened Monday to contribute to the division's intensive effort to prepare itself for reception of 8,000 selectees in April.

Schools opening Monday will include the armorers' course, to be conducted by Capt. George E. Levings, Capt. Melvin H. Harris and Lieut. E. P. Brown, all of Washington, under direction of Lieut. Col. P. W. Root, division ordnance officer. Others will be the bandsmen and buglers' course, conducted by Goldman. The administration course, conducted by Lieut. Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, of Washington, division adjutant general, and the initial intelligence course, conducted by Lieut. Col. George Henderson, division intelligence officer.

Brig. Gen. William H. Sands, commanding the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade, was guest of honor at the regimental officers' mess of the 111th Field Artillery (Virginia), Wednesday night. He will be entertained tonight by the officers of the 110th Field Artillery, of Maryland.

Calvert Group Opposes Bill To Drop Dog Tax

Prince Frederick, Md., Feb. 27 (AP). Freedom for Calvert County canines to go their unlicensed way was opposed today by farmers and sportsmen on the county game department advisory council.

They voiced opposition to a bill introduced in the General Assembly by Senator J. Wilmer Johnson (Democrat), of Calvert, which would eliminate the dog tax law in Calvert County.

The advisory council has asked General Assembly to work against Senator Johnson's bill, and named a committee of John B. Gray, Ramsey Hodges and Allen S. Bowen to devise a plan for better enforcement of the dog tax law.

R. A. F. Raid On Cologne Sets 150 Fires

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 27.—Royal Air Force bombers struck furiously last night in their fifth raid at Cologne, Germany's third largest city and important industrial railroad center, inland port and key point in the Nazis communication system.

British fliers first sent down a rain of incendiary bombs that started at least 150 fires. Then they followed the incendiary downpour with a bombardment of high explosives that added general destruction.

Aerial attacks were also made on the Boulogne and Flushing air bases and German occupied France. Fighter patrols contacted the hostile side of the Straits of Dover.

The air ministry announced that three bombers and two fighters were missing.

One R. A. F. fighter pilot asserted that he had "probably destroyed two German planes at enemy air bases in northern France."

The Germans lost two planes in raids over Britain today, it was announced.

London had two raid warnings during the day, both brief. Bombs fell on the capital in the second attack. There were some damage and casualties.

East Anglia and other parts of the east coast bore the brunt of the day's enemy activity, but German planes were also reported yesterday over west England, the Midlands, the south coast and northeast Scotland. Nightfall brought cessation of the attacks.

Stark Off to Inspect Atlantic Fleet Units

The Navy Department, announcing Stark's departure, said the trip would take several weeks.

Stark will proceed first to the Caribbean area in a naval vessel and from there will visit other units of the fleet by using both surface ships and airplanes.

British Warn Ships To Submit to Search

The British government issued a warning yesterday that ships failing to comply with new controls established at the West Indian island of Trinidad might be fired upon.

In a notice published by the hydrographic office of the United States Navy, British authorities at Trinidad instructed all vessels entering the Gulf of Paria to sail close alongside an examination vessel.

British examiners may then board the vessels to determine whether they carry contraband for Germany or Italy.

3 More Legion Parties Tonight To Aid Blood-Bank Fund

A festive weekend of American Legion parties will be turned into long-range good, through benefit to the year-round service of the blood bank at Children's Hospital.

Three legion parties are scheduled for tonight, and as many for tomorrow night, with several other organizations holding parties of their own.

The funds, received at The Post, from the blood bank campaign reached $1,567.55 yesterday. Addition to $278.60 of legion proceeds included in that total, $441.40 of legion money is on its way in.

W. A. Corley, child welfare chairman for the District Department of the American Legion, said yesterday that the $720 raised by the legion to date is $60 more than the amount contributed by the same posts and auxiliary units last year.

Children's Hospital has received $521.03 in blood bank contributions, sent directly there, instead of to The Post. These receipts include $124 raised at the recent benefit given by the nursing staff.

The parties to be given by legion groups tonight include Stephen P. McGroarty Post, game party; K. of C. Hall, 3327 North Washington Boulevard, Clarendon, Va.; Sergt. Jasper Post and Auxiliary Unit, card party, 1407 Webster Street Northwest; Government Printing Office Post, motion picture party, in Harding Hall, GPO Building.

A dance will be given in Colonial Village Community House tonight, under direction of Mrs. George E. Youngblood and Jacob Blake.

A movie party at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Tivoli Theater, Fourteenth Street and Park Road Northwest, featuring "In Old Colorado," will benefit the transfusion and serum service at Children's Hospital.

Among amounts received from benefit events or donations are the following: Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post No. 23, $100; Kenneth H. Nash Post and Auxiliary Unit No. 8, $60; George E. Killeen Post and Auxiliary Unit No. 25, $108.60; the Rockport Fund, Inc., $50; Washington Post party, $11.25; Railroad Retirement Board, $21.15; Army and Navy Club, $93; Washington Bridge League, $209; Boys Club of Washington, $5.95; Joe Turner's Arena, $206.60; Chevy Chase Club, $85.25; University Club, $51; Columbia Country Club, $55; Bureau of Internal Revenue Post No. 39, $10.

Two Ousted Police Court Aides Are Indicted as Embezzlers

Two ousted Police Court aides were accused of diverting fines to their own pockets in a series of indictments returned yesterday by the District grand jury.

Indicted were Joseph R. Burko, former Traffic Court clerk, and James Edward Sullivan, 35, former bailiff, 3701 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Judges John P. McMahon, Walter J. Casey and George D. Neilson discharged them "for the good of the service" on January 18.

Burko surrendered yesterday and pleaded not guilty before Justice F. Dickinson Letts, being freed on $5,000 bond. Accused of criminal conspiracy, forgery, petit larceny and embezzlement of Police Court fines, he would face a maximum sentence of 80 years in prison and a $35,600 fine if convicted. He retained Attorney James J. Laughlin.

May Surrender Today

Charged with grand and petit larceny, embezzlement and criminal conspiracy, Sullivan would face a maximum sentence of 40 years and a $35,600 fine, if convicted. It was understood that he would surrender today.

Assistant District Attorney Allen J. Krouse and Detective Sergt. Joseph Shimon presented evidence to the grand jury in an investigation of the Police Court which took nearly two months.

The jurors accused Burko and Sullivan of a criminal conspiracy and returned 13 specific indictments based on several transactions alleged to have occurred in the Traffic Court presided over by Judge Hobart Newman. These cases were:

Benjamin Warner Smith, 722 Kenyon Street Northwest, said that Judge Newman fined him $10 for speeding last October 19 and he gave Sullivan $8. The latter and Burko are accused of embezzling and stealing the money. Burko is accused of forging the records by adding an entry of suspended sentence.

Thomas G. Wilson, 1908 Fourth Street Northwest, said he was fined $15 for speeding August 27 and sent it to the court by Garland Leo Proctor, courthouse elevator man, 1206 Walter Place Southeast. Burko is accused of embezzling the money and altering the records.

Albert Franklin, 417 Q Street Northwest, said he was fined $15 last December 13 for driving without a permit and gave $12 to Sullivan. Both Burko and Sullivan are accused of stealing and embezzling the money. Burko also was accused of forging a "suspended sentence" entry in the records.

Court Record Missing

James Alfred Proctor, 59 N Street Northwest, said he paid Sullivan a $20 speeding fine in two installments last July. Both men were accused of stealing and embezzling the money. The court record is said to be missing.

Wilbert Morris Tasker, 5313 Fifth Street Northwest, said that when he was fined $100 last November 20 for driving while drunk he paid Sullivan $75. Sullivan is accused of grand larceny and embezzlement, and Burko of forging an entry of delayed payment.

Burko became an asistant clerk in October, 1937, at a salary of $1,920 a year. Sullivan was named a bailiff in April, 1939, at a salary of $1,440 a year.

Knudsen Assails Defense Plants On Employment

The Nation's labor supply is being needlessly disrupted by certain manufacturers engaging in "labor seputing and Nation-wide advertising" for workers, instead of using the U. S. Employment Service, it was asserted yesterday by William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management.

In letters sent to all holders of defense contracts, Knudsen said it is now more necessary than ever that employers utilize the public employment service, as recommended by the Defense Commission some months ago.

Some employers, Knudsen said, by duplicating existing recruitment and placement facilities, have caused "unnecessary migration of labor, high rates of labor turnover, disturbances of established labor standards . . . and other wasteful and inefficient practices which the Nation cannot afford."

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

The rush to get in a round of parties before the advent of Lent has left most Truthtown socialites in a state of prostration. Climax of the pre-Lenten season was the Babylonian ball given last week at the Hotal Arabesque by Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Gliderlyly. Several of the guests who had been on a round of parties throughout the week collapsed and were taken home in ambulances. Featured in the entertainment was a swing orchestra, the members dressed as Arab sheiks, and dancers in Salome attire. During the supper guests were entertained by automatic handwriting on the wall.

Mrs. Whitherford Bleakhouse celebrated the end of the major social season by giving a large tea to pay off all her social obligations. Finding the ballroom of the Hotel Swank, which she had first engaged, too small to accommodate her guests, she also took over the ballroom of the Hotel Rococco and the Hotel Arabesque. Mrs. Bleakhouse, resplendent in gold lame, with an ermine cape edged with ostrich feathers, and wearing a Floradora hat, dashed in her limousine from one ballroom to another and managed to be on hand to greet all of the more important guests at the various places.

Mrs. Roswell Clymer and Mrs. Parvenu Popinjay, exhausted by their social feud of the recent season, will take long rests before the opening of the little season. Mrs. Clymer has left for Palm Beach and Mrs. Popinjay for Hollywood. Mrs. Thornberry Flitt has gone to Sun Valley, Ida-ho, for rest and meditation.

Genteel Event

Despite the opening of Lent, Mrs. Domineck Leghorn and Mrs. Buff Orpington will go on with their plans for the benefit ball next week at the Plush Sofa Club. "We made a mistake in figuring when Lent began," said Mrs. Orpington. "However" I do not feel there will be any objection to the event as we have restricted the sale of tickets to members of our most conservative circles."

Palm Beach, Fla.—Members of the Ladies Parachute Patrol, who are doing their drilling here this winter, have temporarily ceased their activities due to a deadlock in the patrol over the design of the new spring uniforms. A faction led by Mrs. Wimplegate Wadd has taken a stand for a chartreuse colored uniform while the administration forces, led by Mrs. Ethelbert Vanderpuffer, are holding out for a deep beige colored outfit.

"Everybody knows that beige is THE color for spring," said Mrs. Vanderpuffer in a statement to the press. "The craze for green is simply a fad that will pass. We cannot afford to have uniforms that will be outmoded by May when we return North."

Watch for Clothes Cut for Action— From Out West

Los Angeles (AP).—Clothes for active living in a fast-moving world will come out of the West in '41, judging from all signs at the California fashion futures displays.

Hollywood designers long ago learned the trick of making outfits to look well in motion—the most strenuous motion, too, in many a movie sequence. And Californians, who probably travel farther on the average than any other people in the course of a single day's business or pleasure, have come to demand what the trade calls "functional" clothes. Certainly they are clothes of movement.

At the recent futures' showings, lines were flowing, shoulders soft and roomy, and skirts with pencil-slim silhouette often had pleats for graceful walking. Speaking of walking, Bill Joyce, who designed many of the shoes in the show, has decided ideas about lowered heels for all but strictly formal occasions.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife, 36, Wonders If She and Her Husband Are Selfish in Not Wanting Another Child; They Have a 'Darling Boy of 4,' and Modest Income

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like your opinion, and the opinions of your readers, as to whether my husband and I are selfish in saying we do not want another child. Here is my story: I am 36. My husband is 46. We have a darling little boy, aged 4. When we had him, we fully intended to have another child in about two years,—but when the time came, my health (at that period) would not permit it.

Now, it seems too late,—in that, if we had another child, the two would never be real playmates or companions. For that reason, I do not feel like tying myself down again and my husband doesn't feel he wants the extra expense. I know this will sound callous to some. Even some of our friends say, "Well, if you don't want two children, you should never have had the first one. It isn't being fair to him, to make him an only child." But so far, he is unspoiled; and we hope to keep him that way.

When I was a child, I resented the fact that I had brothers and sisters. I was the eldest of four children and always had to be nursemaid. I never had anything as a child. My best doll was a rag doll. Yet, when I look back, I think it was the most wonderful life a child could have had. I wish our son could be reared on a little farm such as we had,—with a woods and stream. Love of nature seems to have been born in him. He never wants a flower to fade, nor anything living to be hurt.

After finishing the eighth grade, I worked my way through business college and held several nice positions before I married. Today, I have a world of friends, some of whom are society folk. My husband was reared by two aunts,—one an old maid and the other a widow. They gave him what money could buy,—such as a car and a college education. But that was all. He says he doesn't remember ever having had a playmate or chum inside his home.

Neither of us had ever been anywhere until last summer, when we took a trip with our son that we enjoyed tremendously. We would like to do that each summer hereafter. Also, just lately I have been able to do club work and other things I always knew I would enjoy. And we want to give our son all the advantages due him. My husband never will make more money than he does now and since we are no longer "youngsters," we feel we should get a little out of life ourselves. If we had another child, it would mean having a maid, and trips would be simply out of the question then.

When I think of the turmoil and uncertainty in the world today, it seems to me if an unborn child could speak, it would say, "Leave me out of it." What do you think?

JEAN.

Wife Is Rationalizing Her Shirker's Reaction

DEAR JEAN: If you and your husband are wholeheartedly in agreement that a second baby would be more of a nuisance than a benefit,—why, then, there is no point in rehashing the subject indefinitely; and making a hobby of collecting other persons' opinions of your decision. Frankly, I think you personally have a bad conscience in the matter,—which prompts you to bid for majority justification of your attitude.

The person who knows in his heart that he is steering a "right" course, all things considered, just hews to the line, regardless of what others may think. I shouldn't wonder if you haven't been "selling your husband a bill of goods," about the unwisdom, the unprofitable sacrifice of having another child;—and now that he 's confirming your arguments "against," with others of his own, you are unconsciously dismayed by the deal you have "cinched."

Your theory that your son never could be the comrade or playmate of a brother or sister, five years younger (say), is just plain silly,—so far as the age-angle goes. However, it is possible that he is so pampered in the role of "apple of your eye," or "darling of your heart," that he would have a tough time adjusting to an infant newcomer on the scene. But if you were to have another child and your first-born subsequently suffered a sense of being ignominiously dethroned, the fault would, of course, be more his parents' than his,—for not having psychologically prepared him to welcome, love, graciously make place for, and happily share his all, as it were, with the needful defenceless little stranger.

In my opinion, the true explanation of your "one child" status is simply this: Given a choice in the matter, you just haven't got what it takes,—of psychic stamina,—to deliberately elect to go through the ordeal of child bearing again. If babies were, indeed, delivered by the stork, you would have sent in your specifications for child No. 2 long ago,—and you would be brimming over with pride and satisfaction today, as you watched your two youngsters wrangling and reconciling and sharing, and generally enjoying the healthful babyhood rough-and-tumble of a "more than one child" family life.

However, if having another child by the natural route, after three wasted years of indecision (during which you have been drifting nearer to the typical rigidity of middle age), would change you from a more or less footloose, happy hearted wife and mother, into (as you might think) an overworked, nerve-strained slave to domestic responsibilities—why, then, of course, you would be doing nobody a favor in adding a fourth to the family circle.

But I am of the impression that if you fail to have another child, you will be dogged through life by the nagging conviction that you cheated your whole family out of an enriching experience, for the unavowed reason that you let cowardice and selfishness govern your actions after a first bout with childbirth. All your talk about the desirability of annual summer trips; about the dead-end nature of your husband's earning abilities; about the turmoil and uncertainty of the world today, etc., etc., is simply a smoke screen thrown out to conceal your shirker's reaction to the business of being a woman.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Leather Furniture Gaining in Use

Leather had an important role in the recent Chicago furniture market. One manufacturer presented tables with tooled leather tops that had been weathered to look like museum pieces. Other new applications of leather are found in tooled, stitched and quilted leathers for chest fronts, bed headboards, desk and table tops. Black patent leather for furniture is a high style, while pastel leathers continue to lead in popularity.

The beauty about modern leathers is their complete washability and their lovely suppleness that make them as workable as a fabric. It's even been successfully finished so that it doesn't dry or buckle when used for lamp shades.

Hankie Twosome

Now it's twin hankies! No longer is one tiny kerchief enough, but it's the correct thing to have identical twins. Take advantage of pockets in suits this spring and tuck a checkered accent in them. The Burmel plaid handkerchiefs of cotton, woven in England, make striking accessory notes used in pairs for the pockets of the suit shown above. They may be chosen in little pin checks, or big bold plaids with background colors that match or blend with the season's most popular shades. To add a dash of spice, be sure that the suit is smart and simple in detail.

Flower Hat for Luncheon Dates

Hollywood, Calif.—Olivia de Havilland rates her bonnets that bloom as the ideal chapeaux for luncheon dates because flowers are always so feminine and flattering.

As soft contrast to a navy tailleur with "dandy" jabot of lace, Olivia's postillion banked with white feather daisies is a favorite. And two flower-laden bonnets are true bonnet shapes but not the saccharine type of yesteryear. In fact, a French provincial hat with wide sophisticated brim and orange marigolds might be called dashing.

Fit of New Clothes, Index to Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN YOU put on three extra pounds, the waistband of your dresses gets snug. Another couple of pounds and you will feel the strain through the shoulders. And just five pounds more and you'll be buying half a size larger.

The way your clothes fit, however, is more than an indication of which way your weight is going. It also tells whether or not you have been doing any exercise. Without regular exercise, your measurements expand faster than warranted by an increase in weight.

If you exercise regularly, you can keep your measurements pared down even though you gain a couple of pounds. But, better still, increasing your activity will usually take care of that small a gain.

How to Slim Hips

As soon as your clothes begin to fit snugly, start exercising and take a tuck in your measurements. Begin with the one that is the tightest squeeze. If it's the waistline, here are two waistline whittlers which also slim the hips:

Lie on the back on the floor with arms straight out on floor at sides, shoulder-level, less extended straight down. Turn the shoulders over to the right side and flying the left arm down on top of the right. At the same time, extend the left leg straight out on the floor in back. Come back to starting position, and repeat, turning over to left and kicking right leg straight out in back on floor.

Keep the same starting position and try to touch alternate toes to the outstretched arms, keeping other leg straight down on floor.

Exercise Shoulders

To beautify the shoulders, stand erect with feet slightly apart, hips tucked under, tummy muscles pulled up, and circle the arms backward. Arm circling works the entire shoulder girdle and will eliminate the slightest resemblance to the over-padded dowager. Circle arms slowly and lazily, swinging from the shoulders and keeping the forearms out of the movement.

Finish with leg circling for hips and thighs—stand erect with a hand on chair at side for support. Raise right leg high up in front and, trying to hold foot same distance from floor, swing around to side and out in back. Repeat ten times for each leg, then kick—hard! Swing the leg high up in front, then out in back, making the hip muscles do all the work.

Ivory Trend

The creamy white opaque substance of elephants' tusks, very fine grained and hard, is made of ivory. From prehistoric times on it has been treasured and used for small carved articles, many of them very beautiful. Some of the most revealing relics of ancient Egyptian life are of ivory. It has been used for furniture decoration, inlays, plaques, mounts and so on from very early times

'Defense Wives' Meet Residential Society at Mrs. Robert's Luncheon

SEVERAL OF THE "defense wives" who are making the local season unusually interesting this year met the residential variety of Washingtonian yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr. Guest of honor was attractive Mrs. James Forrestal, whose husband came from New York last summer to serve as Undersecretary of the Navy.

Among the other guests were Mrs. Robert A. Lovett and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker. Mr. Lovett, a banker, was recently drafted to service as special assistant to Secretary of War Stimson. Mrs. Wanamaker is a temporary widow, her husband being in London as a naval observer. Yesterday she dashed in for a cocktail before luncheon and away again to attend a committee meeting.

"Evie" Robert, handsomer than ever with her Nassau sunburn, gathered the group together at the 1925 F Street Club. About 30 met for luncheon at three large tables centered with red carnations and fern. The hostess wore a black dress with a square neck edged with a pleated ruffle and gold clips to match her necklace.

Mrs. Forrestal also chose black, with clips of brilliants at the square neck and a smart black and white striped hat trimmed with pink roses. She had been hard at work up to the moment of the luncheon preparing for the Picadilly Arcade bazaar in April.

When Mrs. Wanamaker dashed in for a cocktail, she was accompanied by Countess Zoppola, who has leased Mrs. Christopher Bramwell's house. Mrs. Wanamaker, a famous beauty, wore on the lapel of her mink coat a pale pink carnation of the same shade as her tiny ostrich trimmed hat.

Mrs. George Earle Among Guests

A surprise guest was Mrs. George Earle, wife of our Minister to Bulgaria. ("Mr. Earle's favorite song," quipped somebody, "is the 'Battle Hymn of the Republic.') Mrs. Earle, who is young and handsome, wore a black dress with frilly white collar, and a pale flower trimmed her powder blue hat. She is staying here with Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, who is just up from a four-week siege of influenza. Mrs. Palmer was at the luncheon yesterday, smart in black with a high-crowned hat shrouded in veiling which reached to her waist. Mrs. Earle will be in Washington for several days. Since leaving the Balkans last summer she has been at their home near Philadelphia.

Pretty Mrs. Millard Tydings, with angelic white frills around the neck of her black dress, and a hat of white bird wings, chatted with Mrs. George A. Garrett. Up from the country came Mrs. George Sloane, smart in a severe black outfit, with a high-crowned hat and a three-quarter length coat of silver foxes.

Mrs. Harold Walker Assists Daughter

Mrs. Harold Walker, mother of Mrs. Robert, was hostess at one of the three tables. She was in black with a silver fox cape. Mrs. John Caswell dashed in, looking breathless but chic in a short fur jacket and wide brimmed hat to match her black frock. Mrs. Jouett Shouse, home again after a visit to New York and Boston, wore furs with her smart tailleur.

Mrs. John Towers, wife of the Chief of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, sat next to Mrs. Forrestal. Looking like a sister act, Mrs. Foulke Dewey and her house guest, Mrs. Philip Maher of Chicago, arrived together. Both wore black dresses with white hats—Mrs. Dewey's, a Dutch cap topped with a furled feather and Mrs. Maher's, a poke bonnet. Mrs. Maher, who is a niece of Charles Michaelson of the Democratic National Committee, left by plane last night for Miami.

Mrs. George Marye and Mrs. Sidney Cloman arrived at the luncheon together. Others included Mrs. Eugene Carusi, who said her husband had gone to Seattle on Navy duty; Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, in a navy blue redingote outfit and matching sailor; Mrs. Pearsons Rust, whose smart spring suit was topped off with a rose crowned hat; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Miss Meredith Howard, Miss Dudley Harmon, Mrs. Arthur Krock, in a stunning Germaine Monteil wool suit and huge brown hat; Mrs. Frank Waldrop, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Miss Betty Hynes, and Miss Azadia Newman. The latter is here from Hollywood to paint a portrait of former Senator Henry Ashurst and several others. She wore a purple wool dress with matching hat, tied under her chin and a silver fox coat.

Biddles Also Have Luncheon Party

In the library of the F Street Club, across the hall from Mrs. Robert's party, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Biddle were entertaining rfriends. The newly appointed Ambassador to Poland, the Netherlands, Norway and Denmark plans to leave next week for London, where his headquarters will be. His wife has received permission to accompany him and is already busy weighing her clothes—they are going by Clipper, so luggage must be pared to a minimum.

Mrs. Biddle will be in Philadelphia on Wednesday to make a speech before members of the Polish American colony there. She will talk on her harrowing experiences in Poland. Meanwhile, her son-in-law and daughter, Prince and Princess Hohenlohe, are planning to move early in March to the farm in Maryland which they recently bought. They have already acquired a station wagon to go with it. Every room in the old mansion has a fireplace—one, according to a visitor, "big enough to roast a small elephant."

Mrs. Owen B. Winters, the former Mrs. Louise Gwynn Turnure, posed for this picture with her two children, Lawrence and Pamela, in front of their home at Cat Cay, Bahamas. Mrs. Winters is expected to come to Washington early next month to visit her father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. William C. Gwynn

Senate Colleagues Are Entertained By Ellender

An old-fashioned Louisiana dinner, featuring chicken spaghetti and all the trimmings, accented last night's calendar when Senator Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana, entertained at a stag party in his apartment at 2633 Sixteenth Street.

Mrs. Ellender is in New Orleans, where she went to attend the Mardi Gras festivities and also a birthday party in honor of her mother. Senator Ellender gathered in 12 friends—all Senators or former Senators—for an informal fete that, as the host described it, was "one of those help-yourself - and - have-all-you-want affairs."

It was not planned specifically as a party in his honor, but nevertheless, Senator Burton K. Wheeler got most of the spotlight when it was revealed that he was celebrating his fifty-third birthday.

Others in the company were Senators Alben W. Barkley, John Bankhead, Sherman Minton, Lister Hill, Tom Connally, Pat Harrison, M. C. Wallgren, Robert La Follette, George D. Aiken and John Overton, and former Senator Edward Burke.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

THE NEW consultant in French literature at the Library of Congress—and delighted to have the job—is the man who formerly held in France the important position which corresponds roughly to our Undersecretary of State. He is Alexis Leger, one of the most famous diplomats in Europe and for many years head of the French Foreign Office.

DUDLEY HARMON

After devoting most of his life to working for peace and disarmament, M. Leger found himself a penniless refugee from France. He arrived here shortly after the fall of his country. A bachelor, now in his early fifties, he used to write poetry under a nom de plume. M. Leger is a great friend of another poet, Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress.

ANOTHER French refugee in Washington, who is earning her own way for the first time in her life, is Countess de Gramont. Her husband is still training with the de Gaulle forces in England and she must earn the living.

In recent weeks the Countess has been clerking in a local emporium. But now she has developed a bad case of "store feet" and has decided to divide her time between giving French lessons in the morning and working in a small hat shop in the afternoon. Among her pupils in French are Sita Finkenstaedt, Theodora Sedgwick, and Mrs. Donald Hiss. The latter gives Mariette de Gramont English lessons in exchange.

COUNTESS DE GRAMONT was one of the attractive younger hostesses of the French Embassy for several years before the war. Now, besides her various jobs, she also has a paying guest in her Decatur Place Apartment. The Countess also supports her three children, one of whom has a scholarship at the Foxhall Nursery School.

Just before France fell the de Gramonts rather optimistically bought a small house near Paris. They get no word, smuggled or otherwise, from their friends in the occupied part, and for months have been without news of Gabriel's stepfather, Victor Hugo, great grandson of the famous poet and novelist. They do not even know where he is.

THE de Gramonts are a complicated family. Mme. Hugo, Count de Gramont's mother, was born in Italy, and Countess de Gramont is a Greek. Mme. Hugo has returned to this country and is also working—for a well-known beauty dispenser in New York. Most of Countess de Gramont's relatives are still in Athens. One of her brothers is at Sun Valley, the Greeks outside of Greece not having been mobilized because of the difficulty and expense of getting them back.

Mariette de Gramont has no idea when she will see her husband again. When he was secretary of the French Embassy here Count de Gramont insisted on going back to France to fight. Told he wasn't needed, he kept after the authorities anyway, until finally he got permission. After the fall of France he escaped to England wearing a Polish uniform. His wife and their three children returned to Washington.

SPEAKING of refugees, one American couple who had lived for 25 years in Paris recently arrived in New York. They had to leave everything behind, and the wife says she feels just like a bride starting life over again—but minus trousseau or wedding presents.

Washington is full these days of interesting people whose lives have been turned upside down by the war. In its new international character is becoming almost as cosmopolitan as the Riviera used to be—but without the gayety which was the main feature of that part of the world.

Mrs. McNary Is Honor Guest

Mrs. Charles L. McNary was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman at the National Republican Club.

Others there were Mrs. William H. King, Senora de Echegaray, wife of the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy; Mrs. Charles Lea, Mrs. Joseph Washington, Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed, Mrs. James M. Beck, Mrs. John M. Jenkins, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, Mrs. Wade H. Ellis.

Still others included Mrs. Lawrence V. Benet, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Ralph Greenough, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Mrs. William A. Scully, Mrs. Elvin R. Heiberg, Mrs. Harry Cootes, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. Linday Russell, Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey and Countess Castellane, sister of the hostess.

Mrs. Biddle To Hold 'At Home'

Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the Solicitor General will be "at home" Wednesday afternoon from 4 until 7 o'clock in their new home, 1669 Thirty-first Street.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Biddle gathered in the member of the board of directors of the Washington Civic Theater to fete Clinch Calkins. Miss Calkins, who is known socially as Mrs. Mark Merrill, read from her new play, "State Occasions." Following the reading Mrs. Biddle served cocktails.

Wallaces Are Guests Of Women Democrats

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace were guests of honor last night at the annual dinner of the Woman's National Democratic Club marking the installation of new officers. Mrs. Curtis Shears, incoming president, received the gavel from Mrs. Claude Pepper, who has served since the resignation of Mrs. D. Tucker Brown.

Over 250 members and guests attended the dinner at Hotel 2400 for the installation ceremonies and the brief talk by the Vice President, which was "off the record."

The annual dinner is always held the day following the annual business meeting at which the retiring officers make their reports and the new ones are voted on. Mrs. Pepper, as the retiring president, placed a wreath on the tomb of Woodrow Wilson at National Cathedral, a custom which is also an annual ceremony of the club.

One of the features of the business meeting was the presentation of a check for $1,000 to the club as an anonymous gift to the organization, given in honor of Mrs. Pepper, providing a life membership in her name.

Mrs. Shears, who took office last night, moved to Washington two years ago when her husband, former assistant United States district attorney in New York, came to the legal department of the Federal Trade Commission. He is a lieutenant commander in the Navy and is now the executive in the office of the Administrator of Export Control, an important division of the Defense Commission.

As soon as Mrs. Shears arrived in the Capital she became affiliated with the club as an active worker. Her first work was undertaking the chairmanship of the annual spring fete two years ago, which was an outstanding success.

She has also been active in the Junior League here, continuing work in that organization with whose New York branch she was prominently affiliated. One of her chief projects there was the founding of and serving as chairman for the North Miamus Recreation Center in Greenwich, Conn. She was educated at Ascot School in England while her family lived there and later was graduated from Rosemary Hall in Greenwich.

The board of governors includes: Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Miss Ellis Meredith, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Hale T. Shenefield, Mrs. Howell Moorhead and Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard.

The Maryland Society will have a reception, entertainment and dance tonight at the Kennedy-Warren, 3133 Connecticut Avenue, from 9:30 to 1 o'clock. The occasion will be in celebration of George Washington's Birthday, and Senator George L. Rradcliffe, of Maryland, will make an address on Washington.

The address will be followed by the singing of "America" and "Maryland, My Maryland" by Mr. and Mrs. Harian Randall, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Wallace Lynn.

Voteless League Sets Hearings On D. C. Relief

Making another contribution toward the solution of the relief problem in Washington, the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters has announced it will conduct open hearings on relief Monday and Tuesday. The sessions will be from 1:30 to 4:30 both afternoons at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets, and are open to the public. More than 500 invitations have been issued.

"No one seems to know all phases of the local situation in regard to relief needs, especially in relation to the development of the defense program," said Mrs. George Barnes Galloway, chairman of the league's committee on relief.

"The league has chosen this method of ascertaining the facts. The purpose of our committee is to construct a total picture of the relief problem. On the first day there will be the testimony of public agencies dealing with families in need, those familiar with health and social problems involved, and those concerned with employment in various forms. On Tuesday a cross section of the private welfare agencies and various organized citizens' groups will be heard from.

"The testimony will be supplemented by supporting material, and our final report should be given as well-rounded and unbiased a view of the present situation as we can secure."

Mrs. Henry P. Chandler, chairman of the league's department of government and social welfare, commented: "The fact that 26 witnesses promptly and enthusiastically accepted our invitation indicates a wholesome degree of citizen interest in welfare problems."

Other members of the hearing committee will be Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, president of the league, and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, past president of the league and identified for many years with efforts toward civic improvement.

Testimony will be presented Monday by Robert E. Bondy, director of the Department of Public Welfare; Helen W. Martin, assistant superintendent, public assistance division; Otto J. Cass, superintendent, public assistance division; A. Madorah Donahue, superintendent, protective service; Genevieve Gabower, chief of social service, Juvenile Court; Florence Conlin, social worker, Landlord-Tenant Court; Rhoda Milliken, Women's Bureau, Police Department; Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer of the District; Edwin Jones, director, District Employment Office; Paul Edwards, director, WPA of the District; John Ihlder, director, Alley Dwelling Authority.

All witnesses are asked to supplement their brief period of testimony by filing supporting material which will be considered in writing the final report.

Miss Rita Beuchert, of the Council of Social Agencies, will submit statistical reports.

The Washington Junior Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society, of Denver, will hold a fashion show and dance tomorrow night at the Washington Hotel at 8:30. D. G. S. Celebrates 20th Anniversary With New Warehouse

New Warehouse—Built at a cost of $750,000, this new D. G. S. Warehouse at Fourth and C Streets Southwest contains 135,000 square feet of storage space

D. G. S. President

Bigger Business, Motto of Co-op

The District Grocery Stores, Inc., this week celebrates its 20 years of existence as a retailers-cooperative—with the completion of setting up its headquarters in a new warehouse at Fourth and C Streets Southwest.

It was not "business as usual," but "bigger business than ever" this week as a fleet of 15 trailer-trucks rolled away from the huge brick structure bearing cargoes of meat, bins of fresh, crisp vegetables, and crates of canned goods to the 285 member stores of the organization scattered through Washington and nearby communities.

Persistent work, guided by vision, over a period of several years, has resulted in the new building—a symbol of the organization's growth from a small group of merchants who banded together to buy their goods 20 years ago.

To Isaac Jacobson, president, and the officers working with him go most of the credit for bringing the company to its present strength on its twentieth anniversary.

At the Mayflower Hotel last Sunday evening, the 285 member merchants and their guests gathered in celebration of the occasion. Hailing the achievements of the organization were Hector Lazo, executive vice president of the Cooperative Food Distributors of America; Charles P. McCormick, president of the McCormick Co., of Baltimore, and Roger J. Whiteford, counsel for D. G. S.

David Hornstein, secretary of the United Food Stores and secretary of the Independent Food Distributors, of the District, served as toastmaster. Al Kaufman was general chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Preceding the banquet an "open house" was held at the warehouse.

The recently completed building represents a vast increase in space over the former D. G. S. plant rented from the Terminal Refrigerating and Warehousing Building at Fourth and D Streets Southwest.

Visitors inspecting the new plant, which measures 430 feet by 105 feet, found housed under the one roof all the distributing activities of D. G. S.: groceries, fresh meats, fresh produce, fresh fish, eggs, butter, cheese, beverages, candies and tobacco. Space also has been reserved for the executive and general offices.

Refrigerated rooms for the storage of fresh meats smoked meats, canned meats, dry fresh produce and wet fresh produce are located on the second floor. Six banana-ripening and tomato-ripening rooms are on the same level. Also located there are the organization's egg candling and repacking departments.

The third floor is used entirely for the storage of groceries.

Two spur tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which will accommodate 14 freight cars, run level with the second floor. Goods are distributed to the various departments by three capacity elevators.

These facilities for handling the organization's business are "quite a change from the way we began" in the words of Louis Dennison, one of the founders of D. G. S. and now grocery buyer for the firm.

With a few others, Mr. Dennison got the idea back in 1919 that independent grocers in Washington should band together for common purchasing and advertising. The plan was formally launched with 17 merchants participating on February 22, 1921.

The retailers-cooperative had its first "warehouse" in the cellar of Mr. Dennison's home at 3929 Thirteenth Street Northwest. He operated his own store at the time, and in spare moments delivered the goods to the members of the infant organization in an old Ford truck.

D. G. S. grew too fast to keep its warehouse in Mr. Dennison's cellar very long. A larger storage space was rented in a building on "Little C" Street Northwest, and when this space soon became too small the organization moved on to more room in the 200 block of Sixth Street Southwest.

By 1928 it had outgrown the B Street location, and took up its quarters in the Terminal Warehouse where it remained until the recent completion of its new home.

Cash was frequently a difficult item to obtain in the early days, Mr. Dennison pointed out. A carload of soap helped out.

When a carload of soap arrived Mr. Dennison went around with the agent, tirelessly soliciting the member merchants to pay cash for the scented bars. That cash came at an opportune moment. D. G. S. climbed out of its crib and has been growing ever since.

The period of most rapid growth fell in the years 1927-1930 when more than 100 merchants joined the organization.

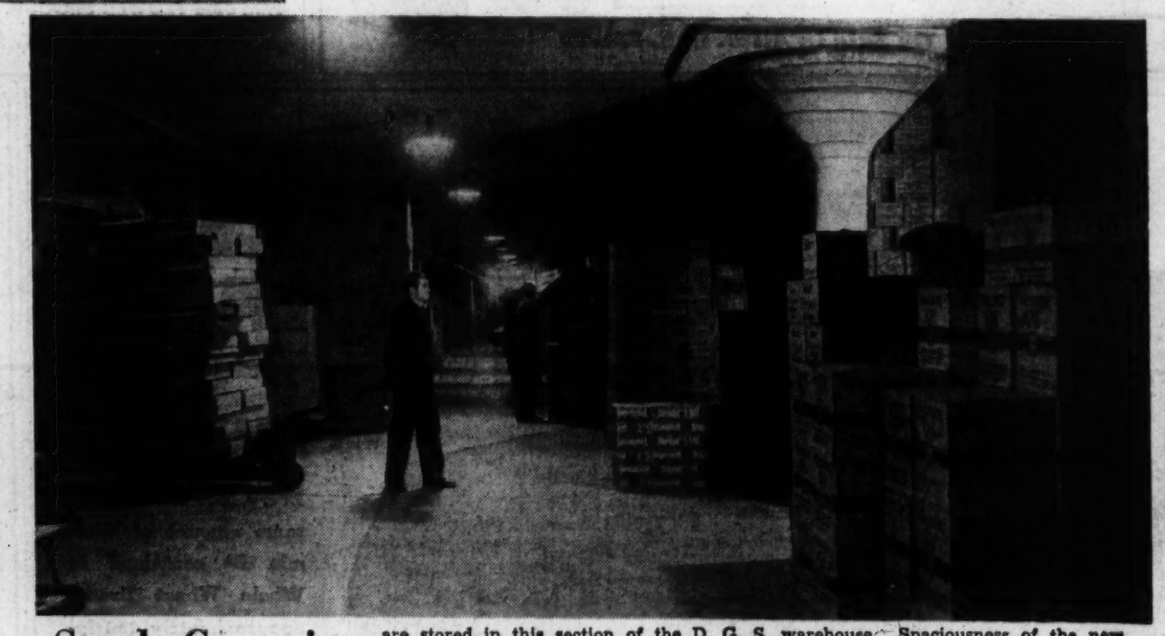
"But we haven't stopped growing yet," said Mr. Dennison.

Vegetable Inspection

All vegetables are carefully inspected at the D. G. S. Warehouse before being delivered to the retailers' stores. Vegetables must be in "garden condition." They are delivered every day to member stores by fast trucks owned by the cooperative

Egg Candling—A staff of experts grade and inspect all eggs as they are received at the warehouse. The new D. G. S. Warehouse has a special department for this work

Social Activities—D. G. S. has planned a social program. Bowling is the outstanding sports activity on the current program. The D. G. S. Bowling League features weekly contests



Staple Groceries are stored in this section of the D. G. S. warehouse. Spaciousness of the new building makes handling of merchandise efficient and easy

Meat Department—One of the busiest D. G. S. departments is the meat department. Meats are delivered daily from special refrigerated storage units to member stores

Banana Room—This room, equipped with temperature and humidity control, has special facilities for ripening and preserving bananas

Long Route From Wholesaler

From wholesale market to consumer's table is a long route. The problem is complicated by the variety of goods sold by District Grocery Stores.

The organization buys and delivers to its member grocers fresh meats, fresh fruits, fresh vegetables, canned goods, beer, candy, tobacco, cheese, milk, butter, eggs and many other commodities.

Jacobson Dream Comes True in New D.G.S. Warehouse

On the morning of May 21, 1940, Isaac Jacobson, president of D. G. S., turned the first spadeful of earth on the site of the new warehouse for the organization at Fourth and C Streets Southwest.

Jacobson's act was the realization of a dream of many years. A special silver shovel turned the earth in the presence of numerous prominent persons in the business and civic life of Washington.

The structure was ready for occupation by February 1. It was officially opened, however, with an "open house" ceremony attended by more than 5,000 persons last Sunday.

All offices are air-conditioned. Specifications call for the installation of the most modern warehouse equipment to facilitate the quick and easy handling of all merchandise.

At the western end of the building a modern service and gas station has been erected to take care of the organization's fleet of tractor-trailer trucks, and also to purvey oil, gas and motor accessories to the members.

D. G. S. Men End Day With Bowling

After the corner District Grocery Store merchant has spent the day on his feet, you won't find him at home soaking his tired feet in a pail of hot water.

On a Wednesday evening he'll probably be at the Penn Bowling Recreation Center at 1207 Taylor Street Northwest watching or taking part in the organization's bowling league weekly tournament.

There are eight teams in the league this year, the eighth season it has been in existence. Members are selected from members, warehousemen, salesmen and clerks. Each team plays under the auspices of a sponsor who, with each member of his team, donates money for the annual posting of prizes.

When members of the D. G. S. teams go out to bowl, they do just that. They go out for high scores. And they get them.

On February 14 Harry Katz and Lou Krakow, both on the Harry's Service Center team, rolled a high game of 158 and top set of 416, respectively.

So keen is competition in the league this year that the fourth place team is only two games behind the first place team.

Even in bowling the teams don't forget they are grocers. Names of the teams and their present standing in order are: Wilkins Coffee, Bamby Bread, Orange and Black, Harry's Service Center, Cross & Blackwell, Maxwell House and Sunsweet Prunes.

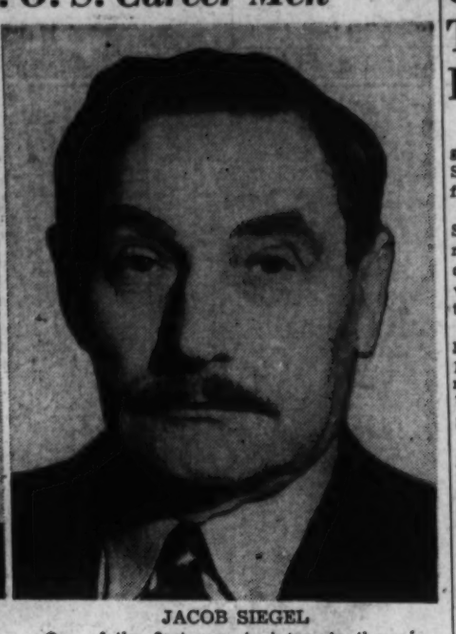
STUART T. DeBELL

He will become the youngest D. G. S. manager when he opens his own D. G. S. store next week on the Lee Highway, near Bull Run, Va.



JACOB SIEGEL

One of the first men to interest others in starting Washington's first retailers Co-operative—the District Grocery Stores, is now retired

Youth Shuns City to Open Home-Town Store

Stuart T. DeBell, 22, of Bull Run, Va., is one young man who did not fall for the lure of the big city. Fortune comes more quickly to him who stays in home territory, he figures.

He chose the District Grocery Stores as the best means for an ambitious young man to "get ahead."

So next week (March 7) he will open his own D. G. S. store on Lee Highway, near Bull Run, and become the youngest store manager in the company.

DeBell was born in Centerville, Va.; attended Fairfax High School, and was graduated from Strayer College in Washington in 1939, with the degree of Bachelor of Commercial Science. He was married last August.

A year's experience in retail trading in Strasburg, Va., gave him experience and taught him one of the things in which he believes most strongly.

"There is a big field in retail trading today that most young men overlook," he said.

"I wanted to enter the field and I'd rather be in a small community. There are too many fellows going to the big cities these days and trying to make a go of it when they might do better in smaller communities. I looked around for the best opportunity. I didn't want to get in with a chain store because I wanted to be completely my own boss.

"After investigating thoroughly I found that the District Grocery Stores was the best possibility. I couldn't compete alone with chain stores, but by being able to buy through D. G. S. I could.

"You see I'm still my own boss. I buy through them, but the store is mine. The officers of D. G. S. have given me a lot of advice that you pay a lot of money for when you're starting out alone. They gave it to me free. They've treated me darned well."

DeBell has no time for hobbies. "Right now my job is my hobby," he said.

He's working hard to open his store by March 7. It will be housed in a new brick building constructed especially for the purpose. He will have one assistant.

"But I'll be my own boss," he emphasized.

Cofounder Tells About Early Days

Like many another American organization, the District Grocery Stores got its start when "a few fellows got to talking."

This is from the memory of Jacob Siegel, one of the first three or four men who interested others into becoming the original 17 merchants who launched Washington's first retailers-cooperative.

Mr. Siegel, now 60 years old, sold his store at 300 Maryland Avenue Northeast last September and is now living in retirement at 320 Oglethorpe Street Northwest.

Still Interested

He is retired to the extent that he doesn't get up at 5 a. m. to go to his place of business. But his mind refuses to retire, and he admits that he's as interested in the retail grocery trade as he ever was.

It was a "feeling in the bones" that brought him to Washington in 1904 after he stepped off the ship in New York that had brought him from his native Poland.

By 1915 he was owner and operator of the Maryland Avenue store where he served the community for a quarter of a century.

The corner grocer is an important institution in American life, Mr. Siegel believes. "You get to know all your customers, and they aren't just customers to you," he said. "You know them and their families and they tell you their troubles."

Depends on Man

But successful retail trading "all depends on the man," Mr. Siegel emphasized. "Always dedicate yourself to good merchandise and to politeness. Never have anything but the best you can obtain on your shelves."

He carried out his ideals as a grocer most effectively under D. G. S., he says.

Like Stuart T. DeBell, the youngest store manager in the organization, he believes there is a future for a young man in the retail grocer trade—if he has ideals and tries to live up to them.

Hors D'Oeuvres Go the U. S. Way With Native Foods

When you want to give a truly American party to honor the sentiment of the times, in spirit you can wave a little flag as you carry a tray of real United States appetizers into your living room. For today, appetizers can be American in a thorough-going way.

Although imported delicacies are becoming scarce, the ingenious hostess needn't worry. She can invent her own tidbits from American-grown foods.

Many an intriguing hostess tray can be assembled from tasty cubes of meat, cheese, shrimp, pickles, all United States-produced. Take for instance, these suggestions:

Phone Habit Turned Stores Into 'Markets'

The buying habits of the Washington housewife make her a distinctive creature.

Shoppers in some large American cities fall into the category of "market basket shoppers." But this is not altogether true in the District, where the telephone is considered a great asset to shopping.

Merchants credit the tendency of reaching for the phone instead of the family market basket to the fact that many Washington housewives are Government employes who do not have time to shop at leisure.

As a result Washington food stores are known as "markets," stores that carry a complete variety of all foods under one roof. Every District Grocery Store, as far back as 1930, consisted primarily of three complete departments—general groceries, fresh meats and fresh vegetables and fruits.

Government employes are paid on the 1st and 15th of the month. This leads to extension of credit by the independent merchant and establishes a closer relation between merchant and customer.

District Grocery Stores entered the field of fresh meats after lengthy discussion and debate. The project was launched by renting additional space, 30 feet by 40 feet in the same warehouse. The space was inclosed, refrigeration installed, and a meat buyer hired. There were many obstacles to overcome because certain packers did not believe the idea practical. Despite this, the new meat department struggled along, attracting an increasing number of customers, by handling only the highest quality of meats.

In 1932 the District Grocery Stores were approached by the Senior Marketing Specialist of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture. He explained the beef grading and stamping service of the Department, how it was operating in other cities, its advantages, and the latent possibilities for a real job of meat merchandising in Washington.

The company began purchase of Government graded, stamped beef by requesting sources of supply in the Middle West to grade and stamp the beef in their plants. Gradually members of the District Grocery Stores came to realize they were handling the finest beef that could be purchased.

In the latter part of 1932 the company found it necessary to double the size of its original storage space to 80 by 20 feet. In 1935 a cold storage room on another floor of the warehouse was acquired for cold storage of livers, corned beef, cheese and similar products.

Not until 1934 did the grocers begin to merchandise quality of their meats in their regular weekly advertisements. During that period it was their custom to merely mention the beef was "cut from United States Government graded and stamped 'choice' steer beef."

This method was continued for nearly a year until an extensive promotional campaign was started. Customers then began to ask to see the stamp on the meat they purchased. The members' meat business grew by leaps and bounds.

Since 1935 there has been an increasing volume of sales. Recently the figures marked more than a 30 per cent increase over the 1935 sales.

The sale of lamb and pork has increased proportionately with the sale of beef. The firm introduced to Washington its own brand of smoked hams which have become so popular that several thousand hams were sold recently during a weekly sale.

Officials of the company tend to give Uncle Sam a share in the credit for Washington's welcome reception of District Grocery Stores meats. Uncle Sam puts his stamp on only the best, and, say the officials, the best is none too good for those who deal with District Grocery Stores.

D.G.S. Employes Find Cupid Knows His Groceries

Since September, 1928, there have been 13 marriages among employes and members of the District Grocery Stores.

The first marriage was that of Minnie Tolkins, bookkeeper and cashier, to Charles E. Kirsch, now operator of the Kum-In Market at 2004 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. They were married in September, 1928.

The most recent marriages were in February, 1940, when Sadie Mortow, secretary to the warehouse manager, married Jack Weiner, manager of the candy department, and Sarah Snider, of the general offices, married Martin Watman, operator of a market.

Canning Process Popularizes Fruit Juices

Americans' tastes in eating and drinking change, and the grocery business must change with them.

Canned fruit juices have become increasingly popular since the District Grocery Stores were founded in 1921. It all goes back to the fact that physicians discovered canning would not harm vitamins.

Aims of Store Cooperatives Are Explained

Retailer-owned cooperatives are dedicated to the proposition that individual merchants helped to build this Nation, and individual merchants are necessary to bring it to its full fruition.

This statement by Hector Lazo, executive vice president of the Cooperative Food Distributors of America, describes the basic conception of the founders of the District Grocery Stores 20 years ago this week.

"Hence it follows that the individual merchant must be preserved," continued Mr. Lazo. "He deserves preservation only, however, on the basis of efficiency and service to the community; not for sentimental reasons."

Retailers cooperatives have one main objective: to make and keep their retail members competitive with any and all operators in their trading area, Mr. Lazo pointed out. "By 'competitive' is meant the entire field of retail merchandising, including buying at the right price, advertising, promoting and distributing to the consumer."

Retailer-cooperatives vary slightly in their individual methods, but on the whole follow a general pattern established successfully over 50 years of retailer-owned cooperative endeavor.

They seek first, by combining buying, to obtain the lowest available price in quantity purchases. Natural economies are made possible by large-scale buying, and merchants taking full advantage of their warehouse company can in most cases come into ownership of their merchandise on a competitive equality with the chains and other large operators.

The successful retailer-cooperative eliminates most of the sales effort necessary to the average warehouse firm by having his market already available through the member stores of the organization.

The national average sales of all independent retail grocers, even eliminating the very small concerns which are not strictly speaking "grocery stores," averaged about $18,000 annual volume per store, according to the 1935 census.

In a recent survey of retailer-owned stores involving some 5,000 retail units in eight trading areas in all sections of the country, annual volume per store was found to average more than $36,000. While their margin of profit is less, their volume is much greater.

The benefit to the merchant under this plan has also resulted in benefit to the consumer, it was said. This has followed in the District Grocery Stores organization just as it has followed wherever the retailer-cooperatives are in operation, it is claimed.

An increased volume of trade has resulted in merchants having fresher stocks on their shelves and increased merchant buying power has permitted a better grade of products to be introduced to the stores, it is said. Mass quantity buying has resulted in lower prices, it is said.

D. G. S. Head Is Merchant In Own Right

Jovial, keen-eyed Isaac Jacobson is a two-fold business man. He is president of the District Grocery Stores, Inc. He is also a merchant in his own right with a store at Tenth and K Streets Northwest.

Norfolk, Va., was his birthplace 47 years ago. In 1914 he came to Washington and started in the grocery business. His career as a merchant in the District has been interrupted twice.

For five years he sold olive oil throughout the United States. In the World War he served as a lieutenant at Camp Johnson, Fla., Camp Greene, S. C., and Camp Cody, N. Mex.

Mr. Jacobson became associated with the American Grocers Society, one of the first cooperatives, in 1929. After a period in the wholesale grocery business, he returned to retailing.

A turning point in his mercantile career came rather inauspiciously on May 7, 1928, when he became associated with the District Grocery Stores as a member grocer. He was soon elected a member of the board of directors and in July, 1930, was elected president. He has served in the same capacity ever since with the exception of one term.

Under the NRA he served as treasurer for the District Food Industry Code Authority. In 1937 he was instrumental in organizing the Independent Food Distributors of the District, and in recognition of his efforts was elected president of the organization.

The District Grocery Stores, Inc., has become one of the leading retailer-cooperatives in the country under his guidance, today boasting a total membership of 281 stores.

Mr. Jacobson says he has no time for hobbies. He is interested in civic affairs, and is fond of baseball, boxing and an occasional movie. "Work—and work hard" is his maxim.

His home is at 3113 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

Ailing Engine Brings Police

A police radio call that "two carloads of drunks" were preparing to go swimming in the Rossdhu Castle (Chevy Chase) moat last night brought a Montgomery County police car speeding to the scene.

Investigating officers failed to find either drunks or swimmers. They did, however, find two carloads of surprised and sober youths trying to start a stalled car.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

War Dept. Planning Big Temporary Units

War Department, which is hiring on an average of 50 employes here daily, has plans to construct a huge temporary building either here or in nearby Virginia, The Post learned last night. An estimate of the cost of the proposed structure already has been presented to the Budget Bureau. Meanwhile, i twas learned that the Budget Bureau is studying the possibility of transferring some of the Federal bureaus to the field to make room here for expanding defense agencies. President Roosevelt is understood to have ordered the study.

The President, it is known, has become concerned over the shortage of space in the District. Moreover, he is said to be provoked over the progress of the Federal Office Building No. 2 that is being constructed in Arlington County and at the delay of Public Buildings Administration in starting construction of the General Federal Office Building. One report had the President driving out to Arlington earlier in the week to make a personal inspection of the progress of Federal Office Building No. 2, which is to be occupied by the Navy.

Federal Works Administrator John Carmody, who is charged with construction of Federal buildings, also is dissatisfied with the progress of the Arlington office building. He is known to have told friends that the contractor is working only 100 men on the building while he should have 700 employed. It's a possibility that Carmody will resort to some sort of drastic action to speed up construction on the building. The $3,000,000 General Federal Office Building hasn't even been started though funds were voted October 9.

Because of the dissatisfaction at PBA over handling of the two buildings, it's highly probable that it won't be given the job of building the proposed temporary building for War Department. Three sites have been suggested for the temporary building—grounds of the Army War College, across the street from the new Social Security Building at the foot of Capitol Hill, and on the old Agriculture experimental farm grounds on the Virginia side of the Arlington Memorial Bridge. The latter site is now favored.

The temporary structure would be built along the lines of the Navy and Munitions Buildings on Constitution Avenue, which were constructed during the World War period. Navy Department also wants to build a $1,000,000 temporary building at the rear of its structure on Constitution Avenue. This request also is being studied by the Budget Bureau.

The plan that stands vitally to affect thousands of Federal workers here is that of Government decentralization. Shifting of Federal bureaus out of Washington to other cities has been proposed frequently by members of Congress. In fact, just a few weeks ago Representative Everett Dirksen, Illinois Republican, introduced a resolution to set up a House committee to study the feasibility of moving some Federal offices out of Washington. Dirksen believes that agencies like Social Security, Census, Interstate Commerce Commission, Railroad Retirement Board and several others could operate more economically in the field than in Washington. The Budget Bureau study places an official seal of approval of at least a study of decentralization.

Civil Service officials estimate that approximately 10,000 new employes will be brought to Washington between now and July 1. New employes have been hired here at the rate of 100 a day for the last several months and the space problem has grown more desperate each day. And after July 1 the hiring of new employes in Washington is expected to be increased.

The first wing of the new War Department Building in Potomac Park should be completed next month. It will give the department only temporary relief as the structure won't house more than 500 employes. The only other Federal structures under construction are a wing to the Weather Bureau and an administration building for Washington Airport, where part of Civil Aeronautics Authority will be transferred.

D. C. Income Tax Changes Approved

Bill Goes to House Group; Would Force Nonresidents To File Returns

Amendments to the District income tax law, which broaden the Capital's jurisdiction but restrict the levy to bona fide residents, will be reported to the House District Committee Monday by its fiscal affairs subcommittee.

Despite objections from Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, at the prospect of his constituents having to file District returns, the subcommittee headed by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, tentatively approved the amendments yesterday.

Glenn Simmon, assistant corporation counsel, pointed out that Washingtonians who earn an income in Virginia or Maryland are required to file returns in these States regardless of their residences.

The practical effect of the major amendments, if adopted by Congress, will be to require nonresidents earning their incomes in Washington and residents who have legal domicile elsewhere to file returns here, along with proof that they have paid a State income tax.

D. C. Would Waive Its Claim

The District will then waive its claim and collect no tax, regardless of the length of actual residence in the National Capital.

Representative Hunter said that the subcommittee will meet early Monday to approve the final revisions and will submit the amendments to the full committee when it meets at 10:30 a. m.

Unless the amendments strike a snag in the full committee, they probably will be called up in the House on the next District day, which falls on March 10.

There are indications that an effort may be made in the District committee to substitute a sales tax or the Pond formula, but Hunter hopes to be able to persuade his colleagues to approve the income tax amendments and to take up alternative revenue proposals subsequently.

Smith declined to state whether he would fight the amendments on the House floor. He explained that they are not yet out of committee.

10,000 in Arlington Affected

At the subcommittee meeting he complained that 10,000 residents of Arlington, alone, would be required to file District income tax returns and receipts showing that they have paid the Virginia tax.

While declining to recede on this requirement, District officials and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, author of the income tax law, agreed that the returns of nonresidents could be strictly informal.

The subcommittee accepted an amendment asked by Attorney General Jackson to permit a taxpayer who receives a large fee for several years, work to pay his tax on a prorata basis in order to avoid the higher bracket levies.

Draft Quota For March Up to 1,750

District Is Unable To Meet Original Figure of 1,100; Revisions Ordered

Washington's Selective Service quota for March was raised to 1,750 last night after Capital's draft headquarters, faced with the inability to raise 1,100 men required for induction March 3-10, ordered all local board quotas suspended.

Originally Washington had been called on by Third Corps Area headquarters to supply 1,100 to be sworn in starting Monday, to be sent to Fort Bliss, Tex., to bring the 260th Coast Artillery, District National Guard regiment, up to war strength.

One hundred and fifty selectees were to be sworn in later in the month. Last night the Third Corps announced a further requisition of 500 Washington colored men, to be inducted March 21 to 29, inclusive.

In recent weeks upward of 5,000 registrants were examined by selective service doctors, but from this number the 1,100 qualified men needed for induction next week were not forthcoming.

While names of 138 men for induction Monday were to be made public last Wednesday, one board failed to submit its quota to headquarters and only 138 men were announced for the first induction day.

Yesterday, when 157 men to go into service Tuesday were to be named, only 109 physically fit registrants were said to be available.

Accordingly selection headquarters declared last night all local board quotas would have to be revised. It was understood some new breakdown of the March quota would be sought which would supply sufficient fit men for the call without causing a delay in the March induction.

Engineers Vital in War, Freeman Says

Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, biographer of Robert E. Lee, turned to the Civil War last night for lessons of American conduct in the present emergency and told 200 Washington military and civilian engineers that the South might not have lost the Civil War or the North might have won earlier if either side had better understood the place of engineering in warfare.

The famous Richmond editor and historian told the annual dinner of the Washington Post of the Society of Military Engineers that both the Confederacy and the Union failed to have sufficient Army engineers, made the mistake of sending some of their ablest engineering officers into the line and overlooked the need of placing young engineers under the guidance of experienced superiors.

He told the gathering in the Washington Hotel that Burnside at Fredericksburg might have won the Richmond campaign but for one oversight. The Army of the Potomac, he said, failed to bring along pontoons to make possible a crossing of the Rappahannock River.

Dr. Freeman questioned the adequacy of the size of the present Corps of Army Engineers. He urged his Engineers audience to combat any attempt to weaken the Army's engineering strength, warning that repetition of mistakes of the Civil War would result in disaster in the next.

"I do not know what lies ahead of you," he said. "But this I know . . . it may not be yours to span another Meuse and drive straight to Abbeville . . . but it is yours to carry the loftiest of all mottoes—'To Serve and To Save.'"

Freeman said he found strong parallels between the campaigns of Lieut. Gen. Sir Achibald Wavell, commander of the British forces in the Near East, and the strategy of Stonewall Jackson. Gen. Allenby, British commander in Palestine during the last World War, was a close student of Jackson, Dr. Freeman said. Allenby, he pointed out, was Gen. Wavell's teacher.

Guests at the dinner included Maj. Gens. Richard L. Moore and William Bryden, deputy chiefs of staff; Brig. Gens. Thomas Robins and Clarence L. Sturdevant, assistants to the chief of Engineers; Rear Admiral L. O. Colbert, chief of the Coast and Geodetic Survey; Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired; Brig. Gen. Charles Kutz, recently returned to active duty; Commander C. L. Garner, Coast and Geodetic Survey; Col. J. Franklin Bell, retired, former District Engineer Commissioner; Col. Stuart Godfrey, former president of the post; Edward Janke, civilian engineer on duty with the construction quartermaster, and Col. Charles Karlstad.

Family Recital At Arts Club Is Pleasing

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Henry Parrett, soprano (Quinta Jensen Frey, accompanist), and Willa Semple, pianist, give a joint recital Thursday night in the Arts Club.

Members and guests of the Arts Club enjoyed last evening one of the family recitals that take place from time to time in the gallery-auditorium where painters exhibit and musicians perform. Those who were generous with their talents on this occasion were Mrs. Henry Parrett and Willa Semple, and between them they presented a program far from hackneyed in content.

BROWN

The Handelian "Air and Variations" with which Miss Semple started out had nothing to do with the legendary harmonious blacksmith, but was the more interesting one from the third piano suite in D minor. Then the eighteenth-century style was given a slight touch of modern treatment in Harold Bauer's seldom-heard arrangements of "Barberini's Minuet," "Ye Sweet Retreat" and an elaborate "Flourish." For her contemporary group she selected Sergei Prokofiev's C major prelude, Charles Griffes' scherzo and two pieces by our own Mary Howe; a nocturne of meditative beauty and a powerful prelude.

Mrs. Parrett's first group was eclectic both in the provenance of the songs and in their character, containing Widor's "Je ne veux pas autre chose," Reger's "Flieder," John Alden Carpenter's Gallicized "The Odalisque" and "On a Screen," and Sibelius' "Flickan kom ifran sin alskings mote." In her second group were conjoined two excellent songs by Olive Dungan, "White Jade" and "Gold Brown Song;" Hans Hermann's "Beim Tanz," Fourdrain's "Chanson Norvegienne" and David Proctor's "I Heard a Bird."

Lynch Nominated For Presidency Of Ft. Davis Group

Fort Davis Citizens Association last night unanimously nominated a slate of officers, headed by P. J. Lynch, for election at the next meeting.

Besides Lynch, nominated for presidency, others were: Nolan J. Taylor, vice-president; Mrs. E. D. Morris, secretary, and Mrs. E. M. Schaff, treasurer.

The association also appointed a committee which will urge construction of sidewalks along Carpenter Street and along Highwood Drive. Members are: C. G. Leland, M. H. Schuck and L. L. Schleicher.

In other action members went on record seeking grading of Thirty-fifth Street between Nash and Pope Streets Southeast.

Pepco, Capital Transit Reach New High

Reflecting the boom in Washington, the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Capital Transit Co. reported to their stockholders yesterday that they had done a record volume of business in 1940.

The Potomac Electric Power Co.'s customers exceeded 200,000, its power sales approached 1,000,000,000 kilowatt hours and the peak demand on its system was 249,000 kilowatts—all record highs.

The Capital Transit Co. and its subsidiaries reported a traffic gain of 7.9 per cent over 1939. At the end of 1940, the company was carrying 108 per cent more passengers than in 1933, and using 68 per cent more vehicles and 48 per cent more employes.

All of the outstanding common stock of Potomac Electric and 50 per cent of the outstanding capital stock of Capital Transit are owned by the Washington Railway & Electric Co., a unit of the North American Co. system.

Net income of Washington Railway & Electric Co for 1940 was $3,330,952, compared with $3,717,317 for 1939. The excess of net income of subsidiaries, including Capital Transit, over dividends paid by them, applicable to Washington Railway & Electric's holdings in such subsidiaries, was $331,963 for 1940, against $181,383 for 1939.

In a report to stockholders, A. G. Neal, president, pointed out that the greater volume of sales by Potomac Electric were made at lower rates effective since February, 1940, and that this, together with increased costs—of which fuel, labor and taxes were important elements—resulted in its net income for 1940 being lower than in 1939.

Mount Vernon Students To Hold Festive Day

Mount Vernon Seminary students will have a festivel day tomorrow with a tea dance and buffet supper in the "field house" on the campus and with a formal dance with a Spanish theme in the evening.

Red Cross Offers Funds for Service Play Equipment

The American Red Cross has offered $1,000,000 for purchase of emergency recreational equipment for use by the rapidly expanding military establishment, the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation announced yesterday.

Addressing Army and Navy morale officers and members of the joint committee, meeting here for a four-day conference on the general welfare of the armed forces, Don C. Smith, director of military and naval welfare of the Red Cross, advised the group that his organization was ready to make the expenditures for emergency recreational facilities in the interest of general public welfare.

As there is a widespread need for recreational material the committee said the offer of the Red Cross would be accepted "to meet the emergency" of the expanding Army and Navy.

Meanwhile, Brig. Gen. J. A. Ulio, assistant to the Adjutant General, announced that the Army, with the wholehearted cooperation of Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, was setting up model week-end recreational camps in the Gulf coast area where men from nearby reservations could spend their leisure time boating, fishing, surf bathing and in other healthy and wholesome forms of entertainment.

B. & O. to Conduct Inquiry Today Into Train Wreck

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad officials announced yesterday they would launch an investigation today into the train wreck in which Samuel Snyder, of Barthlow, Md., was killed Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the fireman, Andrew Duffy, remained in a "fairly comfortable" condition at Casualty Hospital. Earlier in the day a crowd of more than 1,000 watched unavailing efforts of railroad cranes to lift the overturned locomotive back on the track near Lamond Station, Takoma Park, D. C.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald also is carrying on an investigation of the accident, but had reached no findings last night.

Manslaughter Charge Lodged Against Dr. Davis in Auto Death

Dr. Mark O. Davis, 60, well known Washington dentist, last night was out on bond after a manslaughter charge was placed against him in the traffic death of a Chevy Chase (Md.) fireman during the early morning blaze yesterday at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

After being held overnight at the Rockville Jail, Dr. Davis was freed yesterday morning in $2,500 bond pending a hearing scheduled for March 20 at 9:30 a. m. before Judge James C. Christopher at Bethesda.

The automobile victim was John G. Adair, jr., 28, of 301 Highview Avenue, Silver Spring. Police said Adair was struck while watching the pressure on a pumper truck and that his body was hurled 75 feet. Rushed to Georgetown Hospital in the Bethesda rescue squad ambulance, he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Formerly a volunteer fireman, Adair had been a member of the Chevy Chase paid department for more than three years. He is survived by his wife, Anne; a daughter, Regina Anne, 2, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Adair, sr., who reside in Bethesda.

Police said Dr. Davis was on his way from his country home at Ednor, Md., to his home at 4525 Cathedral Avenue when the crash occurred. They said warning flares were blazing in the road, and that traffic was being rerouted.

An investigation into the blaze, which burned through the roof of the main unit of the school, was begun yesterday by Montgomery County Police Chief Andrew M. Newman and fire insurance representatives.

Pupils were excused from classes yesterday. They will not return until Monday. Workmen started yesterday to construct a temporary roof, which is expected to be ready by Monday.

W. U. Group Aids Boys Club Fund

Western Union boys, many of whom know what it is for a "little feller" to get a break in life, will show results of their own drive to aid the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club at today's luncheon report meeting of campaign workers.

Two youngsters, who have shared the major honors in the big "round-up" of their W. U. gang, will turn over $50 to the campaign to aid the 16,500 members of the five boys' clubs. The gifts, from hundreds of Western Union boys, will be given to Campaign Chairman Charles B. Dulcan, sr., at today's session in the National Press Club auditorium.

Duke Eliminates North Carolina in S. C. Play

Blue Devils Win, 38-37, In 1st Round

Tarheel Star, George Glamack Is Halted; S. C., W.-L., V. M. I. Score

By the United Press

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 27.—Duke University, overlooked in the draw, smashed through a heavily favored university of North Carolina team tonight and eliminated the defending champions, 38 to 37, in a first round thriller of the 20th annual Southern conference basketball tournament.

It was one of the closest games in tournament history. Duke started freezing the ball with one minute and nine seconds to play, lost it on a jump ball, regained it on a foul and kept it until 15 seconds remained. The Carolina men threw desperately at the basket but missed as the game ended.

Glamack Stopped

The Blue Devils completely bottled up Big George Glamack, Carolina center who led the league in scoring during the regular season. He did not get a shot at the basket until 14½ minutes after the game started. His total for the evening was four field goals and two free throws, bringing his season total to 538 points.

Chuck Holley, Duke center, and Cy Valasek, guard, with ten points each, were the keymen in the Duke attack. High scoring honors went to Bob Rose, Carolina forward, who bagged six field goals and two free throws.

Duke took an early lead and was ahead at one time, 8 to 2. Glamack tied it at 13-13, and the half ended 17-17. During the entire second half neither team was more than 3 points out in front, and most of the time a single point separated them. The score was tied ten times during the game.

South Carolina Wins

Moving into the semifinals with Duke were second-seeded South Carolina, William and Mary, ranked fourth, and unseeded V. M. I. South Carolina trimmed Richmond, 41-32; William and Mary beat Wake Forest, 52-32, and V. M. I. upset Washington and Lee, 39-32, in the opening round.

The V. M. I.-W. & L. game was the first dual competition between the schools—whose campuses adjoin in Lexington, Va.—since athletic relations were severed in 1904 following a baseball riot between students of the schools.

V. M. I. pulled into a 15-to-6 lead in the first half and was never headed. The Cadets led, 22 to 14, at the half, and although they lost ground in the second half, W. & L. never reached a threatening position.

Howard Dobbins, big W. & L. center, took the game's individual scoring honors with six field goals and two free throws for 14 points. Stumpf, Foster and Sotnyk led the V. M. I. attack.

Zeke Bonura Contemplates Joining Army

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Feb. 27.—Zeke Bonura, troubled and gloomy, decided today that maybe the smart thing for him to do would be to join the Army.

The 215-pound first baseman reflected deeply upon the kind of fate that saw him, after seven years in the majors, sold by the Chicago Cubs to Minneapolis, and said:

"If I don't make a connection with a major league club and if I don't get a satisfactory contract with Minneapolis I think I may join the Army if I can get in for one year."

After that accumulation of "ifs" the man whose antics around first base have delighted thousands, came to a dead stop. He rubbed his chin with a hand big enough for an ordinary man to sit in.

He ventured the opinion that he had four or five more years of big time baseball in his system. Then he plunged on:

"But if I joined up maybe I'd have to serve three years. I heard that's what you have to do if you join. I'll investigate. I wouldn't mind joining up for one year but then we might get in a fight and I don't know when I'd get back."

Then something occurred to him. He began to grin.

"If I went in the army now it might be a real good idea. This year the majors are all stocked up on players. If I went in now, by the time I was getting out next year a lot of those other ones would be going in and there might be some openings."

"I have a lot of troubles," he said. "I have maybe a couple of deals hanging fire. And I'm thinking about the army. And I like to play baseball. I have a lot of things to think about."

Minneapolis offered to release Bonura if he could make a deal satisfactory to himself and the club. So far no deal.

Haynes Gets Attention

Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 27 (AP).—Chicago's White Sox had their first fling at batting practice today, but it was Pitcher Joe Haynes, who received the most attention.

Haynes, obtained from Washington, tried out the arm that troubled him last season and since has undergone careful examinations. Trainer Al Schacht said Haynes' "elbow is sound as far as we can determine now."

York Reports to Tigers

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Rudy York, member of the Detroit Tigers' famous home run firm of Greenberg and York, arrived in the Tiger camp today to join other early birds in training.

The big first baseman said he had signed his contract and indicated he was well pleased.

Eagles Overcome 11-Point Deficit To Win in Final Minutes of Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The University of Mexico's basketball team went through a minor bus accident and a plane ride from Harrisburg, Pa., to get here for the American U. game last night and then lost in the final minutes of play, 45-40.

The bus carrying the touring basketball team to the twenty-eighth game of its two-month tour left the road near Birmingham, N. Y., yesterday morning and struck a tree. No one was injured. The squad made the trip to Harrisburg by auto and boarded a plane that arrived here shortly after 8 p. m.

Cops Lead Dash

A motorcycle police escort made record time through traffic to get the team to American U., and after a hectic day they appeared on the Eagle court some 30 minutes late.

Before a capacity crowd that included members of the Diplomatic Corps and State Department in the gym decked with flags of the nations, the Mexicans made themselves right at home and at halftime led the bewildered hosts, 20-9.

The Eagles came to life in the second half, however, and with Bing Byham and Archie Norford throwing them in from all angles finally passed the invaders with four minutes to play and won by a five-point margin.

The boys apparently didn't hear the halftime speeches that were filled with good sportsmanship and good will, for a few minutes after the second half was under way Rodolfo Diaz and Byham went after the ball with unusual zest and before it was over traded punches. Umpire Rasty Doran ordered both players out of the game but relented and after trading technical foul shots the boys shook hands and all was forgiven.

Passes Featured

The Mexican passing attack was a feature as the boys from south of the border zipped the ball around in tricky fashion with backhand flips, bullet-like overhead passes, arched passes that usually found their mark. The players ranged in height from Humberto Salazar, 5-foot-11, high scorer to 5 foot-5 Delfina Flores, one of the best little players seen here this season.

Feature shot of the evening was made by Diaz, forward of the invaders. Taking the ball downcourt, Diaz threw a long, high pass to Salazar, but it never reached its destination as it settled in the basket instead. Diaz was so amazed he stood for 10 seconds with his head in his hands.

Close officiating in the second half which the Mexican youngsters could not fathom broke their morale somewhat and two players went out on personals.

Jane Cochran and Miss Hicks Win

By the Associated Press

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 27.—Medalist Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., advanced to the semifinals of the South Atlantic Women's Golf Tournament today with a 6 and 5 victory over Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak., Western junior champion.

In other second-round matches, Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., eliminated Helen Edgecomb, of Philadelphia, 3 and 2, and Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., defeated Mrs. Lucile Robinson Mann, of Omaha, Nebr., 2 and 1.

Ben Hogan, Barron Grab Golf Play Lead

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 27.—Belting Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., and Herman Barron of White Plains, N. Y., shot into the 36-hole leadership in the $5,000 St. Petersburg Open today as Henry Picard's score zoomed in a high wind.

Hogan, the year's leading money winner, and Barron finished the second round all square at 136, six under par, while Pickard (who shot a 73, fell back to an eight-way tie at 139. Hogan had a second round 69 and Barron a 68.

Keiser Fires 66

Among them was Herman Keiser of Akron, Ohio, who scored the day's lowest round, a 66, before a chill breeze began sweeping the Pasadena course. Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., who likes the wind, shot a 68 to pull even with Keiser and Chick Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich. Harbert equalled par 71 after a first-round 67.

Picard, whose first-nine 30 paved the way for an opening 66, needed 40 blows on the second nine today. Three under par through the twelfth, he lost five strokes to regulation figures from there out.

Sam Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., and Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago, both slipped to 72s for 139 totals, tying with Harold McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass.; Sam Byrd, of Ardmore, Pa.; Ky Laffoon, of Chicago; Johnny Perelli, of Lake Tahoe, Calif., and Clarence Doser, of Sarasota, Fla.

Scores of 146 or better were necessary to quality for tomorrow's final 36 holes. National Open Champion Lawson Little, of San Francisco, qualified at 145, but withdrew after straining a neck muscle.

Gus Lesnevich Defeats Mann By Big Margin

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Feb. 27.—Gus Lesnevich, Cliffside Park, N. J., puncher, battled into a possible assignment in the Joe Louis Fight-A-Month Club by outpointing Nathan Mann, New Haven, Conn., veteran, in a ten-round bout here tonight. Mann, at 187 pounds, had a 6-pound advantage.

With the Brown Bomber at ringside, Lesnevich won going away before 3,822 spectators in the first of Promoter Mike Jacobs' series of indoor cards here. Referee Elmer McClelland gave Mann only one round, and the two judges awarded the Connecticut Yankee three between them.

Blood-Bank Fight Show Is Postponed For One Week

Postponement of the boxing show scheduled next Monday night at Turner's Arena, with 10 per cent of the gross receipts to go to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank sponsored by The Washington Post and Station WJSV, was announced yesterday by Promoter Joe Turner.

Turner stated the blood bank show would be held on Monday, March 10, and that he was seeking two outstanding featherweights as the attraction.

Efforts to secure a suitable opponent for Cocoa Kid for Monday's show were to no avail, and rather than throw in just "another show" Turner decided on the postponement, he said.

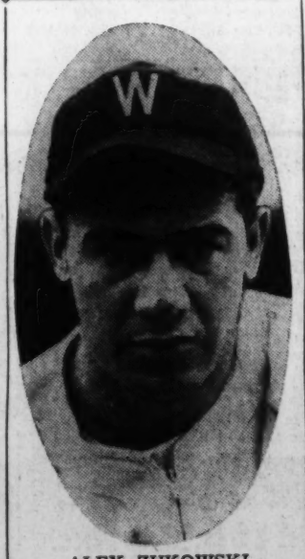
Nats' Rookie Parade — at Orlando

This is the fourth in a series of articles dealing with rookies with the Washington Nats at their training camp in Orlando, Fla. Other stories will appear from time to time in The Post.

ALEX ZUKOWSKI, Pitcher.

He's a stumpy, un-handsome Polish lad whose English accent is still thick, but he's beginning to assume some importance in the Nats' camp. He's a right-hander who came up from Greenville with 22 victories and "the best curve ball in the South Atlantic League."

Since the year of his birth he has been fatherless and quit high school at South River, N. J. at the end of one year. He works in the off-season as a pilot for one of the huge cranes in the Jersey oil refineries and as a steady job it would bring him more money than the minor league salaries he has been making. But he wants to be a big league pitcher.



ALEX ZUKOWSKI

He's being told in the Nats' camp that he has a sweet chance of staying with the Washington club. In fact, he's just about the darling of the rookie crop. The Nats' bosses like his "action" and his grim determination and they are not holding his mere five feet eight inches against him.

He's a 175-pounder despite his shortness of stature, and he's a powerful lad. One of his recommendations is an abnormally long pair of arms that accounts in great part, no doubt, for his effectiveness on the mound. He whips his lengthy right arm through with a classic sort of motion that has been meeting favor in the eyes of Manager Bucky Harris.

When he first arrived in the Nats' camp, he created something of a dither among the Nats' bosses by his striking facial resemblance to old Stanley Coveleskie, another Pole, who led the right-handers of the league when he was with the Nats in 1925.

The impression is that he can pitch all day, he's that rugged. He reported in camp scarcely an ounce over his playing weight as a result of his heavy work all winter and is probably in better condition than any other man on the squad. He's a cinch to get at least a chance to show if he can pitch in the big leagues.

FREDDY FAUST

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—The Yankees used an old, familiar trick to maneuver First Baseman Babe Dahlgren out of the American League, and Clark Griffith is slightly bilious at the realization he was duped.

POVICH

News that the Yankees had successfully waived Dahlgren out of the league and sold him to the Boston Bees struck like a thunderclap in the Nats' camp. Griffith wanted the player but neglected to claim him on the theory that the Yanks would not sell their only accredited first baseman.

It was baseball's version of the old Statue of Liberty play that enabled the Yanks to shake Dahlgren past the Washington team and other American League clubs who might have wanted the player. Griffith explains how it was done.

Last month the Yankees put about 30 ball players on the waiver list. They were even asking waivers on DiMaggio and Ruffing. Consequently we couldn't tell which players the Yankees wanted to get out of the league. The chances are that every club waived on DiMaggio and Ruffing because they knew it was useless to bid for them. The Yanks would withdraw their waiver requests if any team claimed those stars. We didn't think they were serious about Dahlgren, either, so we didn't bother to claim him, either. We did claim about five of their players we thought we had a chance to get."

"That's how Dahlgren slipped by. Something's got to be done to keep these good players in the American League and away from the National. Its time for Judge Landis to step in and take action. The Yanks got Monte Pearson waived out of our league the same way last fall. He's too good a pitcher to get away from us."

In another sense, however, Griffith is not completely unhappy about the Dahlgren incident. The Nats' owner doesn't think that the Yankees have increased their pennant chances by letting the fancy fielding first baseman go, and, as an old Yankee-baiter he will be pleased at any comedown of the New York Club.

There are elements of mystery in the release of Dahlgren by the Yankees. True it is that he was a mere .264 hitter last year and that he has never hit more than .281 in his six years in the big leagues, but the 73 runs he drove in last year was a better record than that of many a .300 hitter and with not another certified big league baseman on their roster, the Yanks seem to have gone off the deep end in releasing Dahlgren.

He may have been no great shucks at bat, but the Babe was just about the cleverest fielding first baseman in the league, with all due deference to such fancy dans as Joe Kuhel, of the White Sox and George McQuinn, of the Browns. When you saw Dahlgren out there scooping up wild throws with trifling ease, or spearing fierce line drives as if he were plucking bean bags, you saw the pinnacle of the art of first base play.

Dahlgren was no drawback to the Yankees despite his .264 batting average. Many a Yankee pitcher owes many a winning ball game to the super-brilliance of Dahlgren at first base, and on occasion he could give that ball a smart ride. He hit 15 home runs in 1939, and an even dozen last year.

Who is the fellow who can taken Dahlgren's place at first base? The first guess might be Johnny Sturm, up from Kansas City in company with infielders Phil Rizzuto and Gerry Priddy. Strum did very well at Kansas City, but that is no guarantee that he will be a big league success. Perhaps the better guess is that Outfielder Tommy Henrich will wind up at first base for the Yankees.

During the fading days of Lou Gehrig, Henrich played a bit of first base for the Yankees and seemed acceptable enough. And last season, when Manager Joe McCarthy seemed on the point of benching Dahlgren to bolster the club's hitting. Henrich was hanging around the bag in field practice. But McCarthy never could bring himself to the actual benching of the clever-fielding Dahlgren, and ended up playing every game of the season for the Yanks.

Henrich, incidentally, has been no ball of fire with the stick in the American League, himself. He hit .307 last year, but in two preceeding seasons he hit .270 and .277 respectively. And he can't carry Dahlgren's glove when the discussion turns to their respective ability to play first base. There is no evidence that either Sturm or Henrich would be a decided improvement over Dahlgren, if any.

Why, then, did the Yanks release Dahlgren. Well, one answer might be that General Manager Ed Barrow was piqued at the fellow's holdout tactics (he had not accepted terms), and used him as an example to whip other recalcitrant Yanks into line. But that theory is a skimpy one, because Barrow bows to McCarthy in most matters concerning talent, and McCarthy must certainly have approved the transaction that sent Dahlgren to the Bees.

We have the secret suspicion that McCarthy could no longer abide Dahlgren's anemic batting average. In the past, the Yankees' manager has been used to seeing his hitters get so many runs for his pitchers that his was an easy afternoon on the bench. He may have been spoiled by that fact, and perhaps is now so hepped on the subject of batting power that he yearns for the good old days of Yankee murder at the plate at almost any price; hence goodby to Dahlgren.

It may be, however, that McCarthy chose the wrong time to dispatch Dahlgren from the Yankees. The New York club may need him this season like never before. Their plan is to play the rookies Priddy and Rizzuto at second base and shortstop, and to move Joe Gordon to the strange position of third base. Who's gonna go into the dirt or up in the air for those wild throws of an untried set of infielders? Whatever the fellow's name may be, his actions will scarcely be those of a Dahlgren.

Dear Boss:

When I first saw the name Westbrook Pegler at the top of a sports page column I said to myself, "There's one guy I can lick." Of course, I didn't know the man, but somehow it seemed to me a name like that didn't belong beside a race chart or between the big fight story and the ball game.

HAIGHT

I eyed that Westbrook Pegler type and it seemed to say, "Sorry, old chap, but I can't get more than three paragraphs on a pot of tea, so help me."

Now, Boss, I could stand for that Pegler part, but I figured if he were a right guy and had a front handle like that he would at least have the tact to chisel it down to Westy or, better still, change it to Spike or Chuck.

However, after thinking it over, I came to the conclusion that a Westbrook Pegler would be out of his element covering anything but cricket matches, dog shows and badminton, so I could eliminate him as a threat to my objective of becoming America's leading sports writer and concentrate on Damon Runyon, John Kieran and Joe Williams.

Well, Boss, I'm the same guy who labeled Bob Considine a bum when he first came to work for us at The Post and I was wetter than an Atlantic City convention about Westbrook Pegler. In fact, after reading three of his sports columns, I had to revise the standings of favorite sports writers to (1) Walter Haight (2) Westbrook Pegler, and I might have put him first if I hadn't discovered he went to college.

I found myself referring to him as simply Pegler and later, even before I met him, as Peg. What he couldn't do with a sports topic and a typewriter was nobody's business. He cut up some of sportadom's gods and he didn't mind where the pieces fell. He had racketeer promoters burning like Roman candles but when the occasion arose, and it does in sports, that called for praise, Pegler could build up a star so thoroughly that Mercury, Venus and Mars frowned.

Our sports department gang came to know Pegler. On the way to the baseball training camps he used to come into The

Cece Travis 'Virtually' On Contract

Permission Given Myer to Visit Camp; Catcher's Signing Slips Griff's Mind

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—The salary arguments of the obstinate little group of Nats who had been demanding more money have faded to a mere whisper, and Clark Griffith's holdout troubles are virtually at an end, it was learned today.

The Nats' owner revealed that Buddy Myer, who had been withholding his signature to the contract offered him seven weeks ago, has been given permission to come to camp to talk terms. When they come to camp, they always sign. Myer is due tomorrow, with others of the veteran group.

Rick Ferrell, who had been vigorously demanding a pay increase, is in the fold, it develops. Ferrell signed two days ago, it was learned, but Griffith absend-mindedly forgot to announce that fact.

The only other unsigned player is Cecil Travis, and he has "virtually accepted" a contract that will make him the highest paid performer on the Washington club. Travis will step off one of the trains from the North tomorrow or Saturday, grab a pen and make his contract official.

More Like Majors

The scenery here will begin to take on more of a big-leaguish appearance within the next 24 hours when the regulars start arriving for their first workout, scheduled for Saturday.

From Gastonia, N. C., will come Buddy Lewis, by airplane. He is pepped on the subject of flying and spent part of the off-season following the air races around the country. From Appalachicola, Fla., will come Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth, who doesn't have a serious rival for his job.

Ben Chapman will make the trip from Birmingham, Ala., where he will take leave of his music store business; and Buddy Myer will be an arrival from Ellisville, Miss., where he will leave his building contraction affairs to the supervision of his partner. Outfielder Johnny Welaj already is somewhere in Florida. Rick Ferrell will bring his new bride to camp from their honeymoon spot on the west coast of Florida.

By Saturday, the lone missing member of the Nats' regular lineup will be Centerfielder Roger Cramer, who is not expected to arrive for another week. He has been given special permission to remain at his New Jersey home, where Mrs. Cramer recently underwent an operation. From Trenton, N. J., will come Outfielder George Case.

Three first basemen are expected to put in their appearance within the next 24 hours. George Archie, slated to be the No. 1 first sacker of the Nats, will arrive from his winter home in Tennessee; Jimmy Vernon will come from Marcus Hook, Pa., and big Jack Sanford will make the trip from his Virginia home.

Out at Tinker Field today the pace was stepped up for the rookie pitchers and they were ordered to show Manager Bucky Harris how much or how little they knew about some of the finer arts of pitching. Harris surveyed the crop of 'em as they stood on the rubber and exhibited their skill at keeping runners close to the bag. Not a man in the lot met with the complete approval of Harris and he called on big Dutch Leonard to take the rookies in hand.

Notes on Nats

Not a bat has yet been swung in the Nats' camp. . . . Last night's long rains made a young bog of the infield, and the complete workout was held in the outfield. . . . On their idle afternoons and evenings the rookies have been attending the Central Florida Fair here, en masse. . . . Calvin Griffith, boss of the Nats' farm system, is eyeing the rookie talent, and vice versa. . . . The one buck greens fees charged by the local golf course is cutting down the enthusiasm of the players for golf. . . . Coach Clyde Milan is attempting to make a big league outfielder of Joe Mellendeck, one-time star of Georgetown's backfield. . . . James (Dopey) Dean, big pitcher from Charlotte, thinks he's the fellow who will be "another Sid Hudson." . . . Two years ago in the Florida State League, he was rated on a par with Hudson.

Adam Team Scores Over Petworth, 59-37

An individual battle for point honors between members of the same team, Center Merrill Heddings and Forward Berry, of Adam Hats five, developed last night as the D. C. A. A. U. Cage Tourney underwent three games at Heurich gym.

Adam won its game, 59-37, over Petworth A. C., and Heddings won the point clash with 17 to Berry's 16.

In other games Census Bureau trounced Prince Georges B. C., 53-38, and Regal Clothiers clung to an early lead to beat the Y. M. C. A., 46-36.

Ray Steele Still Wrestling King As Hornet Bows

The National Wrestling Association crown was still atop Ray Steele's head after a rousing 28-minute mat scrap with the Green Hornet last night at Turner's Arena, but some 2,600 fans saw it wobble several times.

Steele eventually put his mysterious foe on the floor with a double back drop after the Hornet had put his roughest tactics into play without success.

The semiwindup saw Milo Steinborn continue his winning ways with a 12-minute defeat of Joe DeValteau. Paul Boesch and Len Macaluso battled to a draw; Fred Grubmeir registered his sixth straight victory by beating Abe Yourist, and Lou Plummer lost to Warren Bockwinkle in 19 minutes by disqualification.

Softball Hurling School Arranged Here Tomorrow

A softball school for pitchers will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Heurich gymnasium under the tutelage of Abe Rosenfield, ace hurler hereabouts for the past eight years. All youngsters are welcome to participate and the school will be free of charge.

At 1:30 a meeting of the Senate softball team will be held in the recreation room of Heurich's. The following players have been asked to report: Charlie Acquilino, Jerry Zanilotti, Al and Ralph Wellens, Jimmy and Tucker Woodward, Vic Levenson, John Sullivan, Billy Sullivan, Milt Jacobson, George Tucker, George Larrick, "Pie" Guiliani and Tom Clark.

Eagles Engage Rovers Tonight At Riverside

An opportunity to gain a two point lead in the Eastern Hockey League's pennant race and in so doing to advance an important notch toward the championship awaits the inspired Washington Eagles tonight when they entertain the New York Rovers at Riverside Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

Shortly after tonight's game the Eagles are to entrain for Boston where they are to meet the powerful Boston Olympics in a week-end series in the Boston Garden on Saturday and Sunday nights.

The Eagles go into tonight's game securely knotted with the Baltimore Orioles for the League's lead on a point scoring basis, but enjoy an advantage in that they have played three fewer games than have the Orioles. A victory tonight would establish the Eagles as odds-on favorites for the title, while a loss at this time would prove costly.

The Rover boys, in a determined effort to repeat their recent victory over Washington, will have their best line-up available tonight. Frank Dotten, Elmer Kreller and Red Tilson, red hot scoring threats against the Eagles, and Julian Sawchuk, giant defenseman, are a quartet of picturesque invaders who will bear watching. Gerry Cosby, the sporting goods salesman who has been playing a great goal in a comeback, will be in the nets.

Norm Burns, Washington's brilliant center, again will endeavor to crack the Eastern League's record for goals tied against the Rovers. He currently is tied with Atlantic City's Herb Foster and Baltimore's Norm Calladine, who set the old mark of 53.

Len Burrage, the veteran Eagle who has been favoring a broken toe on his right foot, is back in full stride and will be included in tonight's starting order.

Howard Bows To Shaw After Two Overtimes

In a desperate uphill game, extended to two overtime periods, the Bison quintet of Howard University last night bowed to its most ancient rivals, the Shaw five of Raleigh, N. C., on the university court, 58-56.

The North Carolinians led at the half, 23-13, and increased their lead until, with 7 minutes to go, they were 12 points in front, 43-31. Then the Bisons came to life, Bill Giles and Perry Jones adding points in a belated rush, while the overconfident Shaw was able to add but 1 point by the foul route.

In the final seconds, Giles tossed a ringer from midcourt as the whistle blew, the referee ruling the 2 points good to tie the count at 44-all, the game going into overtime. Flip Jackson added 2 points with a looper from sidecourt, another from the floor as he scooped it on the run, and still another on the same play from the foul line.

These were matched by baskets shoved through by Edmunds and Brown, and Williams' point from the foul line, tieing the game up for a second overtime period, 49-all. The Bisons took a momentary 53-51 lead with 1 minute to play, but failed to freeze the ball, and despite Jackson's two baskets, and additional points from the foul line by Hill and Perry Jones, could not withstand the rush by Elliott and Williams, the latter snatching the ball from Giles' dribble for a basket in the clear that won the game.

Fasano, Sea Gulls, Has Shoulder Injury

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 27 (AP).—Sammy Fasano, star wingman of the Atlantic City Sea Gulls and leading scorer of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, was in City Hospital tonight with "probable clavicle fracture."

Fasano was injured last night as the Sea Gulls lost to the Rivervale Skeeters, 7-4.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 27.—One of the reasons which Primo Carnera advanced for losing his title to Max Baer was that Da Preem's manager, Bill Duffy, was being detained somewhere by Uncle Sam on the night of the fight, for forgetting to cut Unc in on his income. This, Carnera swore, preyed heavily on what he generously identified as his mind, though we suspect that some of those rights which Baer hit the poor bum with had a lot to do with the outcome.

CONSIDINE

We have a somewhat similar case of a manager-in-escrow coming up tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden. Lew Jenkins, the lightweight champ, is meeting Lou Ambers, who was lightweight champ until Jenkins hit him enough on the jaw. Jenkins' manager, Hymie Caplin, is "away," as they say. So we asked Lew how it would affect him.

"Like nothing," the boney Texan answered. "Hymie's a good fellow, and I hated to see what happened. But here's how I figger: if he's in trouble, he's in trouble. There's nothing I can do except forget him—so's I can fight good.

Where I'll miss him is not in my corner," he continued. "Where I'll miss him is in the dressing room before the fight . . . and the weigh-in. Hymie's the best I ever saw at protecting a fighter from the bulling he gets from other camp. You know what I mean. Al Weill (Ambers' manager) will be in there fussing around, saying 'you can't put that much tape on . . . you can't leave that much gauze off . . . you can't do this . . . you can't do that.' Hymie was good at running them guys out of there, so they wouldn't bother me. Hmm . . . just thinking of what Weill is going to say to me makes me want to go out there and hit his fighter harder than I ever hit anybody."

"Let him," Jenkins snapped. "He tried to box me a little the last time, but I nailed him, didn't I? And it's a cinch he ain't getting any faster . . . particularly now that he's weighing around 140 pounds. I'll get him the same way I got him last time . . . by going out there and clipping him early in the fight. And, say, why don't you all lay off that stuff about me hitting him after the second round bell, in the first fight? Sure I hit him, and it didn't do him no good. But, heck, he was on his way out before that. He was on his way out from the time I hit him with a couple rights in the first round. If I hadn't hit him after the bell in the second round he might have lasted a round or two longer. But what's the difference? The outcome would'a been the same."

Jenkins still has hopes of becoming an Army camp boxing instructor. "They're keeping me in mind in Washington," he told us, "they're going to have a big camp down in Brownwood, Tex., where I was born. Fifty-sixty thousand men, before they're through. That's where I'd like to show 'em something about fighting. Naw . . . I can't enlist. I got dependents. Besides, I've had a lot of training. I was in the CCC. They gave me $5 a month and $25 to my people. Then I enlisted in the Regular Army. Twenty bucks and six bits a month, and half that they sent home for me . . . and two and a quarter of the rest went for laundry, two to the canteen for saddle soap, stuff to shine brass with, and so on. I wound up with about two bucks a month for myself, but I'd pick up anywhere from four to ten bucks every now and then for an outside fight.

For one of the few times, if not the first, there have been no tantrums in Jenkins camp this time. "This is the first time I ever stayed in a camp right until it was time to fight," he said. "That's a record for me. Usually, something goes wrong. Usually there's an argument or fight or something, and I blow out. This time everything's been great. I'm coming just in time to sing two hill-billy songs on Bill Stern's program . . . then get a good night's sleep at the Astor."

We asked him about the songs. "Oh . . . hill-billy," he explained. "One's called 'You're My Sunshine' and other's called 'Time Changes Everything.' That sure is true in my case . . . I accompany myself on my git-tar."

The Jenkins' camp at Pompton Lakes produced two notable examples of the malapropism for which the fight game is known. Asked whether he thought that the fight would be as exciting as the last one, Jenkins stoutly asserted that ". . . It'll make their spines quibble." Jenkins also kidded Mushky Jackson, the malaprop champ, into a new gem. On Washington's Birthday the talk around training quarters turned to public heroes and Jenkins kiddingly said, "I don't see why they give that guy Washington so much credit. What'd he ever do?" Mushky was shocked. He sputtered, "That's a terrible unpatriotic thing to say about the man who freed the slaves!"

Metropolitan Cage Tourney Near Complete

With the announcement yesterday of the eight teams to compete in the feminine section of play, the roster for the Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball Tournament starting Monday at Tech gym was complete except for Virginia's male representative.

That may be decided tonight when George Washington High of Alexandria plays host to Washington-Lee of Arlington in the second meeting of the teams this year. If W.-L., which won the earlier engagement, wins tonight its claim to the Northern Virginia title and a berth in the Metropolitan meet will be clear cut. A G. W. triumph, however, will force the playing of a rubber game, probably tomorrow night.

Girl teams to see action, officials announced, will be Mount Rainier, Prince Georges County titlist; St. Cecelia, local parochial champ; Montgomery Blair, Montgomery County crown bearer; G. W. High, of Alexandria; Hyattsville and Sherwood. They will all see action in the first round Tuesday, playing at Ritchie Coliseum, College Park. First game will be at 6:30 and others will follow quickly until the four semifinalists for Wednesday's play are ascertained. Girls finals will precede boys finals next Saturday night at Tech.

Latest boys five to join the Metropolitan championship group is Landon School, which accepted a bid Wednesday. In its premier effort in the meet the Leland quintet will meet Roosevelt High on Tuesday. Other teams in the division will be Gonzaga, Eastern, Bethesda-Chevy Chase, the Virginia entry, Calvin Coolidge and Georgetown Prep.

Hoyas Aim For Team Title In Track Meet

With a full varsity team entered in all events and a freshmen medley relay team, Georgetown will make a serious bid for the team title tomorrow night in the annual I. C. 4-A track championships at Madison Square Garden.

The Hoyas seem well fortified in the runnng events, but lack strength in the field events, with the exception of the shotput, where Al Blozis and Earl Audet are almost certain to bring Georgetown a first and second place.

The freshmen quartet of Hugh Short, Al Rogers, Bill Molloy and Lou Collado will run in the medley relay, consisting of a half-mile, quarter, 220 and mile. Three of this group helped establish the all-time mile relay record for the Garden in the A. A. U. games last week.

In addition to team events, Coach Hardell will enter Jack Doolan and Mort Alnwick in the 60, Charley Williams in the 600, Ken Lyden and Jim Fish in the 100, Phil Carnevale in the mile, Doolan in the broad jump and Dave Wiley in the pole vault and high jump.

Civil Service Table Tennis Entries Filed

The Civil Service Commission leads other departments in entries for the Interdepartmental Colored Table Tennis Tournament, for The Post trophies, that starts next week.

Entries close Monday at 9:30 p. m. at Banneker Junior High School. Play will be in men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles.

The C. S. C. entries are Lawrence Wooby, Bill Bostick, Ralph Fisher, Timothy Kimbrough and Ernest Huggs.

Sacred Heart Five Captures Parochial Title

Sacred Heart School's quintet, perennial power in the Catholic Parochial School Basketball Tournament, caputred the 1941 crown yesterday at Gonzaga gym when it nosed out St. Matthews, 13-9, in the finals.

The winners gradually worked themselves into an 8-5 lead at half time and improved it slightly in the second half. Scotty Cranston, with 6 points, proved best in the scoring department for the winners.

Honors for the game, however, went to St. Matthews' Tom Cahill with 8 of the losers' 9 points.

G. W., St. John's Aim For Tourney Berth

Added importance was given to Monday's game between George Washington and St. John's here when the Johnnies handed N. Y. U. its worst defeat of the season Wednesday night in Madison Square Garden.

George Washington University officials received several requests yesterday from New York sportswriters for tickets to the Riverside Stadium attartcion. The writers are still undecided as to the teams which will compete in the Sportswriters' Championships in New York and St. John's, G. W., and Georgetown are still in the running.

The Johnnies 58-41 triumph over the Violets, their eleventh of the season against four defeats, left them just behind Long Island and C. C. N. Y., a previous conqueror, in the estimation of the New York fans.

Georgetown will get its last chance to make a good showing before the New York writers tonight when the Hoyas invade Fordham in a game that may make or break their chances of playing in the late March tournament. The Rams are just above the .500 mark for the season but have beaten some good teams and are tough in their own gym. The Hoyas have won 15 and lost 3.

Naturally, Georgetown and George Washington cannot both make the N. Y. event so if they are both successful in the games against the metropolitan schools the winner of next Wednesday's G. W.-George Washington attraction at Riverside would be in a commanding position for the coveted bid.

G. W. officials decided to install 350 additional chairs for the Georgetown game and tickets will go on sale today. The chairs will be placed on the floor, three rows under each basket and one row on the north side.

Both the Hoyas and Colonials also have an eye on the N. C. A. A. Championship, won by Indiana last year. Sectional rounds for this event will be held in Atlanta in March and both schools are members of the association and have received feeler bids. Their post-season tournament participation will depend on their showings against the New York schools and each other, however.

Here's how THE SANTA ANITA HANDICAP LOOKS TO CLEM McCARTHY

Feb. 28.—$100,000 to the winner of the famed Santa Anita Handicap to be run Saturday at the beautiful Santa Anita race course near Los Angeles. The lucky horse should be Mioland, carrying the colors of a lucky stable (already twice winner and three times second in this richest race in the world). But Mioland has more than luck to commend him; he is a speedy, strong, game horse, equally at home on fast or muddy track, and trained by one of the masters of his profession—trainer of the world-famed Seabiscuit. Mioland's jockey knows him well, and weight and distance are suited to this grand young thoroughbred that was bred in Oregon.

General Manager is a fast, game and consistent horse and on his peak form should prove the one to beat.

Challedon has always needed severe tightening to show his best form. Invariably his second or third appearance after a rest has revealed a marked improvement.

Sweepida likes the Santa Anita track and should prove a strong contender in this contest. It is sure to be a great race—as the Santa Anita has always been.

Playhouse Scores in Ponce de Leon Purse at Hialeah Park

4-Year-Old Ably Ridden By Ron Nash

Balloter Runs Second, Bar Fly Is Third; Sir Gibson Fourth in Race

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 27.—J. H Miles' Playhouse, a 4-year-old son of Display that had been unable to do better than knock at the door on frequent occasions this winter, found the proper spot in the featured Ponce de Leon Purse here this cloudy afternoon. With Ronnie Nash riding, the $6,500 plater scored a hollow victory over six other high-class members of the claiming division. He clicked by four lengths and paid odds of 3 to 1. Second money went to Mrs. T. Christopher's Balloter, which headed the Parkwood Stable's Bar Fly. Woodvale Farm's Sir Gibson, favorite under Conn McCreary, finished fourth. Playhouse covered a mile and a furlong of the fast strip in 1:51 flat, carrying top weight of 110 pounds.

A crowd of 15,640 spent most of the dreary afternoon watching upset horses crash down in front. In the first six races decided, one split favorite managed to draw the applause.

QUICK CONQUEST began fast, took a short lead in the early stages, but then drew clear through the stretch under strong pressure. MISS SHOPPER, a forward contender all the way, outlasted IRISH IVY in the final drive. The latter secured clear passage and had no excuses. RATION began a trifle slow and closed a big gap.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:38. Winner, Paragon Stable's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOLD TURK, $8.00, $4.40, $3.60; VALEVICTORIAN, $6.00, $5.10; WAR DECLARED, $7.30.

BOLD TURK broke a trifle slowly. He was rushed into contention on the inside in the opening quarter mile, responded to strong pressure through the stretch and drew out, but had little left. VALEVICTORIAN finished with a belated rush and wore WAR DECLARED down in the final stride. WAR DECLARED outbroke the field and displayed good speed, but faltered in the stretch drive. DUSKY GIRL went evenly the entire trip.

Daily double, QUICK CONQUEST and VALEVICTORIAN paid $205.50.

THIRD RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:06½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG BRANDS SON, $29.70, $10.10, $5.30; BIG ROVER, $5.60, $4.10; ENGLISH HARRY, $4.60.

BIG BRANDS SON held the field safe for speed and drew steadily clear after entering the backstretch and won as the rider pleased. BIG ROVER, a forward contender while saving ground all the way, faltered through the stretch and just lasted to stave off ENGLISH HARRY'S bid. The latter gradually improved his position in the last half mile and would have been second in another stride. LANDLUBBER came from far back. The others had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:38½. Winner, Maemere Farm's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAEGAY, $48.40, $27.20, $15.70; APPOINTEE, $20.80, $11.50; REACT, $10.10.

MAEGAY, in a contending position from the start, bettered her position steadily when place pressure and outlasted APPOINTEE when the final test came. APPOINTEE slipped through on the inside entering the stretch, responded gamely to punishment, but could not get up. REACT displayed good speed, but faltered and bore out in the last furlong. HERE AGAIN, prominent early, hung in the final drive. REMOTE CONTROL broke well, but dropped out of contention immediately and was never a serious factor.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (turf course). Purse, $1,400; allowances. The Palajka. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARESTINO, $35.90, $12.30, $5.40; LAATOKKA, $5.50, $4.00; BRIAR SHARP, $4.70.

ARESTINO, badly outrun the first half mile, gained steadily thereafter on the outside of the field and, closing with determination, got up in the last strides. LAATOKKA, rated off the early pace until straightened into the stretch, made a game bid when placed to pressure and took command, but could not withstand the winner's challenge. BRIAR SHARP took command going down the backstretch, saved ground thereafter, but faltered under punishment. MERITORIOUS had no excuses. CAVALIER was badly ridden.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $2,500. The Ponce De Leon; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:36½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAY HOUSE, $8.00, $3.90, $3.60; BALLOTER, $10.40, $5.80; BAR FLY, $4.00.

PLAY HOUSE took command at once, was rated in front while saving ground until entering the stretch, drew out when placed to pressure and won in hand. BALLOTER was well up throughout, responded gamely to punishment and outlasted BAR FLY. The latter, vigorously ridden all the way, finished stoutly. SIR GIBSON could never reach the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,400. Grade C. The Bay Shore. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:07. Winner, J. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIRFLAX, $4.90, $4.40, $3.10; SUN INPLAY, $9.40, $6.00; ONE WITCH, $5.90.

FAIRFLAX, away alertly, shook off his opposition in the opening quarter mile, was never menaced the remainder of the trip. SUN INPLAY, well up from the start, closed gamely and outgamed ONE WITCH. The latter, nearest in pursuit of the leader all the way, weakened in the final drive. PLOWSHARE, away slowly, closed a good gap and finished fastest of all but the winner.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:38. Off at 5:39. Winner, M. B. Cohen's b. h. (9), by Fogon—Calabrava. Trained by M. B. Cohen. Value to winner, $850; second, $100; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:51⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COMMENDADOR II, $7.30, $4.50, $4.10; SNOW, $4.70, $4.60; HANDIBOY, $5.70.

COMMENDADOR II worked his way forwardly while stealing through on the inside, closed courageously to punishment and wore the leaders down in the final drive. SNOW, prominent in the early stages, took command on the stretch turn, but ducked out. He came again and wore HANDIBOY down. The latter displayed high speed and held on well when the final test came. BELLRINGER raced evenly.

Selections at Hialeah

Dear Al:

The Miami Jockey Club Dinner Stakes will be known as "The P. A. B. Widener Dinner Stakes" in the future. The Stakes will be so designated because the son of Joseph E. Widener sponsored the dinner stake idea in 1939 and the event has been successfully continued.

Jockey Eddie DeCamillas left by motor for Baltimore. He will join the E. C. Eastwood Stable, which will race at Bowie. Andy Devere and Jack Riley, entertainers at the Sky Club, have composed a song entitled "Florida, Land of My Dreams," and all proceeds from the number will be donated to the Jockeys' Guild.

G. Ray Bryson sold the 2-year-old Smart, by Brilliant—Georgia W., to Gustav Ring, of Washington, D. C. Ring in turn sold Nosy, a 4-year-old filly, by Whiskalong, —Gabfest, to Bryson. Nosy was a former member of the E. K. Bryson Stable. An ailing shoulder, which he injured in a fall and which he felt might hamper his best riding efforts on Bimelech, caused Jockey F. A. Smith to curtail riding activities. Jockey Don Meade took over pilot duties on Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech last Saturday in the colt's first appearance of the year. Meade will be astride in The Widener this weekend. Trainer Johnny Loftus has announced that the ten horses he has in his care at Hialeah Park for Jerome H. Louchheim will be shipped to Pimlico immediately after the conclusion of the meeting. Trainer Moody Jolley, acting for his employer, Harold A. Clark, sold Cherry Trifle, 4-year-old colt, by Questionnaire—Cherry Tart, to W. R. Cox, of St. Louis. Jolley then purchased Bright Rebel from J. Hastie.

BILL.

First race—ISLAM'S ISLAM deserves a top pick in this field of maiden juveniles. Seems to have had enough education and should perform well for Jockey Anderson. ROLLS ROUGH is a Rolls Royce colt with speed, so I understand, but he's making his first start. The Straus Entry of GRANDILOQUENT and SAMPLER for the minor award.

Second race—COURT COUNSEL is a long one with a fair chance of upsetting the dope in this field. Likes the seven furlongs and may be better than generally rated. WEISENHEIMER is dangerous despite the 120-pound assignment. GREENY for the show end.

Third race—FANTASTICAL has plenty of speed and Jockey Berg will do the booting. Could be the right combination. RED'S RIVAL will have McCreary up and that's reason enough to put him close. FLYING PLAID for the show.

Fourth race—DARKMELUS is another mount for McCreary and will be in a running mood. Likes the route and is reported fit. SURE SWIFT is good now and will be a factor. SLIGHT ERROR for the other cash position.

FIFTH RACE—DAY OFF should go well on the turf course and I'm going to string along with this fit horse. SILENT WITNESS has good races as recommendations. SUN MICA is improving and will be close at the end.

Sixth race—The Woolford Farm Entry of UNERRING and SILVESTRA shapes up well in this field. Both are at tops in condition. ONE JEST will have Don Meade to do the hustling and is a threat. SWEET WILLOW gets heavy weight but promises to be in the thick of contention.

Seventh race—WISE BEE is the speed of the party and I can't leave him off the top. However, I suspect BASHI BAZOUK can do a lot more running than in that last. REHEARSAL to take the show money.

Eighth race—HE MAN may surprise this gang of distance platers. Gets a steadying weight assignment and is ready for the question at good odds. GENERAL PLANET and JAN ONE will battle it out if I have overestimated the ability of the top fellow.

Best bet—FANTASTICAL.

Van Sweringen Reorganization Plan Approved

Cleveland, Feb. 27 (AP).—Approval of an amended plan for reorganization of Van Sweringen Corporation and the Cleveland Terminals Building Co. was recommended today in a report by Special Master Charles I. Russo to Federal District Court.

The Terminals Building Co. would transfer Terminal Tower, Cleveland skyline landmark, and two other Public Square structures to three new companies, but would retain management of the buildings.

The plan also provides for the reduction of an original issue of $6,000,000 of first mortgage leasehold 6 per cent bonds on the Tower Building to $2,414,500, with bondholders receiving about 70 per cent of authorized capital stock in a proposed "Terminal Tower Company."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 27 (AP).—After tumbling as much as 1⅛ cents a bushel today, wheat prices recovered half the loss and closed only ¼-⅝ cents lower than yesterday. May wheat closed at 83-85⅛ and July at 78¼-78⅝.

The early decline, which more than wiped out yesterday's advance, was attributed to selling inspired by weakness of securities, slow flour demand, moisture in some sections of the winter wheat belt and trade nervousness because of Balkan developments, the war in general and uncertainties regarding the domestic farm program. When this selling let up after midsession prices began to recover slowly on the strength of short covering and small scale buying attributed to mills.

Rubber Spurts, Other Staples Are Irregular

By the Associated Press

At New York rubber gained .12 to .24 of a cent a pound. Demand was associated with the possibility a flare-up in the Far East might cut off United States supplies.

Wheat at Chicago slid to final losses of ½ to ¾ of a cent a bushel. The decline was influenced by slow demand for flour and the wobbly behavior of securities. Corn dipped ⅛ to ⅜ of a cent.

Week's Loadings Decrease 5.9%

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 678,493 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 42,683 cars, or 5.9 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 83,110 or 14.0 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 121,751 or 21.9 per cent, compared with 1939.

All classes of loadings declined for the week, which included the Washington's Birthday holiday. The drop in total loadings was slightly larger than usual.

Cotton Futures

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Cotton futures yielded 5 to 8 points today as speculative interests took to the sidelines while hearings started before the Senate Agricultural Committee on the Bankhead bill. The bill, among other provisions, calls for a reduction of cotton acreage.

March liquidation supplemented moderate offerings from New Orleans and the South in new crop deliveries. Trade covering and mill price fixing bolstered prices for a while, but the list gave ground as this demand ebbed.

Worth Street textile dealers reported small demand spread to virtually the entire staple construction group. Prices were unchanged, but a strong undertone prevailed. Fractional premiums were obtained for spot delivery of some specialty numbers.

Exports Wednesday nil. Season so far, 716,553 bales; port receipts, 5,761; port stocks, 3,497,700.

Mesta Machine Net Climbs to $3.08 a Share

By the Associated Press

Mesta Machine Co. yesterday reported 1940 net earnings, after all charges and taxes, of $3,083,032, equal to $3.08 a share on the common stock. This compared with $2,715,427, or $2.71 a share in 1939.

The report said no provision was required for excess profits tax but Federal income tax amounted to $1,040,000, compared with $590,000 in 1939.

Uncompleted business on the company's books at the close of the year totaled $22,954,048 against $10,797,740 carried over from 1939. Lorenz Iversen, president, said the increase in orders was due to "the greatly accelerated operations of the steel industry and to Government contracts for ordnance."

British government bonds tended upward. In the foreign bond market Japanese issues rose ⅛ to 1½ points, apparently on the theory Far Eastern tension had lessened. Belgian 4s were under pressure.

Late Rally Reduces Losses in Stock List; Steels Weak on Bethlehem Labor Trouble

Light selling in the forenoon cut quotations fractions to 2 or more points, with steels the principal sufferers. Support appeared in the final hour and extreme declines were substantially reduced in most instances. There also was an assortment of modest plus signs in evidence at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .1 of a point at 41.3. This composite in the preceding five sessions had been up or unchanged. Transfers of 312,010 shares compared with 382,970 the day before.

Helping stiffen trends at the last was the action of the Senate Finance Committee in approving the excess profits amendments in the tax bill passed by the House last Tuesday. The alterations voted were expected to furnish considerable relief to many hard-pressed corporations, and, incidentally, rebound to the benefit of stockholders in the way of dividends.

That the financial sector is not exactly downhearted was indicated by the sale of a stock exchange seat for $28,000, up $2,000 from a transfer yesterday which equalled the low for memberships since 1898.

The day's relapse was blamed mainly on the revival of pessimism over the Bethlehem Steel strike and fears labor rifts may spread in defense industries and cause the Government to take charge of plants halted by walk-outs.

Business news generally was of a hopeful character, with heavy construction awards again mounting, bank clearings showing a further increase and railway operating income disclosing a sharp recovery shift in transportation. No especial inspiration was derived from war bulletins.

Inland Steel common dropped 2¾ points to 75¾. After Wednesday's close 10,000 shares of this stock were offered by an underwriting group at 77¼.

Under water at the finish were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, American Telephone, Sante Fe, Great Northern, American Smelting, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Eastman Kodak, American Can, Texas Corporation, Bath Iron Works, N. Y. Shipbuilding and Montgomery Ward.

International Paper common and preferred developed late strength. Others ending on the upside included Cerro de Pasco, Chrysler, Loft, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Anaconda, Kennecott and U. S. Rubber.

In an uneven Curb modest gains were posted for American Cyanamid "B," Cities Service, Humble Oil and Phoenix Securities. In arrears were Aluminum of America, Brewster Areo, Singer Mfg., and Gulf Oil. Volume was around 66,000 shares versus 77,000 yesterday.

Iron and Steel Scrap Supplies Reported Heavier

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines yesterday reported an upward trend in available supplies of iron and steel scrap.

On December 31, 1940, it said, domestic stocks of iron and steel scrap at consumers' and suppliers' plants and in transit approximated 7,843,700 tons, compared with 7,832,000 at the end of September, 1940.

Western Pennsylvania reported stocks of purchased and home scrap equivalent to a four-week supply at the estimated December rate of consumption; eastern Ohio and West Virginia, six weeks' supply and other principal consuming districts had six weeks to eight weeks supply available. Inventories in New England and the Western States were equivalent to 19 weeks and 15 weeks needs, respectively, and Southern States had enough for 120 weeks.

SEC Clarifies Recent Report on Investment Firms

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission said yesterday that it had not intended to indicate that additional legislation was necessary for the regulation of investment companies when it reported to Congress Tuesday on one phase of its long investment study.

The report discussed the "abuses and deficiencies in the organization and operation of management investment trusts and trust companies."

Asserting that it wished to correct "certain misunderstandings which have arisen with respect to the significance of this chapter," the commission said in a statement that the abuses described "occurred primarily in the period 1927 to 1935" and that "the chapter, therefore, in essence is historical."

The SEC said that it did not intend to imply that those abuses persisted in the industry today or that the 1940 Investment Company Act was inadequate.

Furniture Sales Increase Sharply

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 27 (AP). Seidman & Seidman, accountants for the furniture industry, reported today that operations in the industry "are now at the highest level in many years."

The firm's report for January showed an increase of 38 per cent in new orders over the corresponding month of 1940, and a 39 per cent gain in unfilled orders.

Part of the gain was attributed to a continued rise in construction of private homes. Preliminary reports, the accountants said, indicated that dollar volume of such construction was 75 per cent higher during January than during the same month a year ago.

Banks' Excess Reserves Leap $100,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported a $100,000,000 jump in excess reserves of banks to a total of $6,540,000,000 in the week ended February 26.

Treasury spending was given as the main reason for the jump, coupled with gold purchases and other technical factors.

The board's statement last night said:

"During the week ended February 26 member bank reserve balances increased $154,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves rose from decreases of $111,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks, $18,000,000 in Treasury cash, and $34,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and an increase of $39,000,000 in gold stock, offset in part by a decrease of $12,000,000 in reserve bank credit and an increase of $37,000,000 in money in circulation. Excess reserves of member banks on February 26 were estimated to be approximately $6,540,000,000, an increase of $100,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended February 26, 1941, were reported as follows in millions of dollars:

13 A.A.U. Bouts Are on Arena Card Tonight

One senior and 12 novice bouts round out tonight's promising card and one of the most attractive senior bouts of the year will bring together Charley Petro, one of the four famous fighting Petro brothers representing the Apollo Athletic Club, and Bernie Cady, Georgetown lad who boxes for the Red Shield Athletic Club.

Walter Haight Goes Local

Post to write his column and we found that he couldn't have been a better guy if he had "Regular" tatooed on his forehead.

He littered up the floor with crumpled copy paper and let cigarette butts burn desks in approved sports department fashion while old Pete Marshall, the telegraph operator, swelled up like a blowfish in anticipation of sending Pegler's column over the Tribune wire.

Later I'd go around to the wire room, get the original copy and it read like poetry to me despite the fact Marshall would have it splattered with chewing-tobacco drippings.

Pegler is off the sport pages now and as you know I didn't nudge him over with the editorial columns.

If it wasn't, then why could he quote almost verbatim yesterday from a sport column he wrote 15 years ago? But, then again, how in the heck did I ever remember a column another fellow wrote 15 years ago?

However, I wanted to write you a letter, Boss, about a certain fight story and, knowing Pegler was in town, I called him on the phone. I was all prepared to say, "You know me, Mr. Pegler. I'm one of Casey Jones' boys down at The Post," but I didn't. I began with "This is Haight" and darned if he didn't come back with "How are you, Walter?"

"I called you to find out if you remembered the fight story you had once about one guy having a sore rib and telling the other guy not to ——," I began, but he broke in with, "Yes, Walter, they were Chuck Wiggins and Tommy Gibbons at New Orleans. Wiggins had cracked a rib in training a couple of days before the fight, so he went to Gibbons and asked him not to hit him on the right side. He pointed to the spot where he was injured, and Gibbons agreed. As you probably recall, Wiggins' bad rib wasn't on his right side at all; it was on his left side, but he had Gibbons figured right. In the first round Gibbons let fly a punch to Wiggins' right side. Wiggins flinched and said, 'Look out, pal, you're going to kill me.' Gibbons replied, 'Sorry, friend, that one slipped.' A little later they went into a half clinch and Gibbons drove another punch into the supposed sore right rib.

"This time Wiggins flinched, but not soon enough to convince Gibbons that it was real. 'Double crossing me, eh?' grunted Gibbons, 'Now I know that your right ribs ain't sore, so I'm going to let you have it in the left ribs.' Gibbons swung his right into the vital spot and Wiggins went down for the count.

"After the fight Gibbons said, 'That Wiggins is a deceitful —— ain't he.'"

Now listen, Boss, please don't be offering Pegler space rates for that long quote. Might give him some ideas, if you know what I mean.

Chapman-Dawson Win 4-Ball Play

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Dick Chapman, national amateur golf champion from New York, and George Dawson, veteran Chicagoan, today won the Miami Biltmore Amateur four-ball championship with a 3-and-1 victory over defending champions Earl Christiansen and Harvey Draughon, Miami police.

Two down at the end of the morning round, Chapman and Dawson bettered par on the afternoon round and went 2-up on the twenty-seventh hole.

Army Five Plays G. W. Cubs Tonight

Army Air Corps basketers, of Selfridge Field, Mich., will tangle with the George Washington U. freshmen tonight at G. W. gym in the first of three games in this area. Other clashes will be with Bolling Field and FBI.

Winners of all their games except that with FBI to date, the Colonial yearlings close their season in a return match with Georgetown frosh in a preliminary to the G. W.-G. U. feature Wednesday at Riverside Stadium. Tonight's game will start at 8 o'clock.

H. & J. Meet Tonight

A meeting will be held for all the members of the H. and J. Construction Co. baseball team tonight at 1430 Ames Place Northeast. The team will compete in The Post Industrial League this season. Call Lincoln 4182-J to book games.

Bladensburg Wins County Cage Feature

Bladensburg High basketers, losers of their first seven games this season, chalked up their eleventh triumph in a row last night when they trampled Mount Rainier, 31-20, to close out first-day hostilities in the second annual Hyattsville High Gold Cup Basketball Tournament at Hyattsville gym.

On the short end of a 9-4 count after the first eight minutes of play, Bladensburg put on a steady rally to take an 11-10 halftime lead and a 20-11 edge going into the last period. The Mounts were never able to recover. Calvin Freidrich led with winners' assault with 11 points.

Seven other games were on the program, four in the afternoon. Of the three other night games the widest margin was hung up by Mount Rainier's girls when they took their eighteenth consecutive victory, 38-4, over Laurel. Oxon Hill's girls had a bit of difficulty but finally tripped Bladensburg, 21-15.

Tadlock started his hot scoring spree right then and there, accounting for seven points in the first eight minutes, and aided by his mates set his team up to a 16-9 margin at the end of the period. He scored eight more points in the second period and his cohorts collaborated to give Hyattsville a 34-10 lead at intermission.

Hyattsville girls, led by their sterling forward, Hildur Reeves, who accounted for 15 points, had little trouble defeating Maryland Park. Helen MacArthur and Bette Pumphrey scored 8 and 7 points respectively, to lead the Parkers' scoring. Hyattsville, holding only a slim 11-to-8 margin at half, did most of its damage in the last two quarters.

Also on the boys' card in night play was a Greenbelt-Oxon Hill clash, which the former won, 39-16, after leading all the way.

The host school came through its opening engagements with flying colors, the boys quint whipping Laurel, 58-30, and girl basketers taking the measure of Maryland Park, 29-15.

A new high in tourney scoring was registered in the boys game when Keith Tadlock, Hoosier forward, rammed home 23 points. Laurel's Laudes Turney sent his mates into a brief lead with four quick baskets as the game began, but Hyattsville came back with a vengeance.

Maryland Park boys had a fairly easy time in sending Devitt Prep down to defeat, 28-19. The Washington boys apparently never started clicking while the Maryland team played a smooth floor game to justify their victory. Devitt which faced an 8-14 deficit at half, nearly caught up with the Parkers in the last-half, scoring but lacked the punch to pick up the ground lost in the first two periods.

Weather Hinders Reds

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—A cool wind and leaden skies dampened battery practice for the world champion Cincinnati Reds today, although the tricky breeze served to good advantage in sharpening the eyes of men sent to the outfield for flies.

Joe Mack, rookie first baseman from Indianapolis, reported to Manager Bill McKechnie, who next expects to hear from Infielder Eddie Joost. Joost, unsigned, is in Florida.

No Captain for Tribe

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Hal Trosky, who served as field captain of the Cleveland Indians last year, told Manager Roger Peckinpaugh today that he would like to be relieved of the job. Peckinpaugh acquiesced, and said the field captaincy would not be filled this year.

Pitcher Nate Andrews, formerly of the St. Louis Browns, was suspended indefinitely today for breaking training regulations.

Williams Not in Camp

Saratota, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Every Boston Red Socker except Ted Williams was present or accounted for today when Manager Joe Cronin completed the battery candidates' preliminary training.

Cronin said he did not know where Williams, his only unsigned player, could be located but he predicted his 1940 problem child would arrive here tomorrow, the deadline for the infielders and outfielders.

The only three members of the squad not in camp were Bobby Doerr and Dom DiMaggio, motoring from California, and Jimmy Foxx, who was winding up his St. Petersburg business affairs.

Bruins Obtain Isaacs, Former Harlem Star

Indications were yesterday that the Washington Bruins, colored professional basketball club, will be at peak strength by the time they take the floor for their game with the world champion Harlem Globe Trotters at Turner's Arena, Tuesday night. Club officials stated last night that the deal for Johnny Isaacs, former Renaissance star, is practically completed and the New York defensive genius will be on hand Sunday afternoon for the Bruins' final test before taking on the celebrated Trotters.

Isaacs came to terms over long distance telephone last night and except for the actual signing of a contract, the transaction making Isaacs a Bruin was concluded. The acquisition of the former Harlem Yankee captain gives the local club the benefit of another experienced pro cager, something which has been sorely lacking in the club despite its fine record. The Bruin management explained that it felt obligated to go to most any extreme to supply another veteran to work along with Tarzan Cooper.

Isaacs will be ready to take his place in the line-up Sunday afternoon when the Bruins take on the Brooklyn Dodgers in a return at 3 p. m. The Dodgers were the first team to defeat the locals this season.

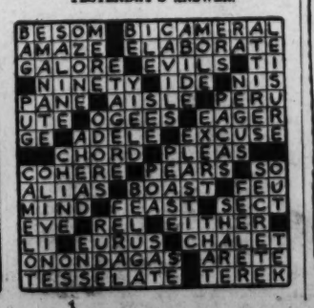
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.



Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"Why should I bother to dress in the morning—you know I can look beautiful any time I want to!"

Listen! with Glynn

Originally Kate Smith had planned something of an alumni night for her Variety Hour over C. B. S. tonight. The now celebrated comedians, Abbott and Costello, who got their radio start on the show, were to plane in from Hollywood where they're making pictures. There was to be a triumphal return of "The Aldrich Family," which got off to such a good start as part of the Kate Smith Variety Hour that it was given its own network spot.

But then, it seems, the rains came. And to, of all places, Hollywood. And for two weeks Abbott and Costello have been sitting around just waiting to shoot one final scene in their latest screen epic. It's an outdoors shot and it calls for sunshine, and, believe it or not, Hollywood just hasn't had any recently.

So the comedy team had to ask a postponement of alumni night. "The Aldrich Family," starring Ezra Stone, didn't see much point in an alumni night without Abbott and Costello. So now the whole thing, weather permitting, is set for next Friday night instead.

The dramatic presentation on the Variety Hour will be a special adaptation of DuBose Heyward's "Mamba's Daughters," starring the famed singer and actress, Ethel Waters. It originally was scheduled to be heard on the Kate Smith hour on March 7.

Contract Bridge

A false squeeze play is often as good as a real one, at least this is what contributor H. B. S. found to be true with the hand shown in today's box. He and his partner reached a grand slam at hearts; they had high cards enough, but the flat distribution of the dummy left them with a loser, which could be elimated only if the defense could be fooled into discarding badly.

Today's Hand

Declarer played six rounds of hearts and three of diamonds; on the last diamond lead he tossed the club ten, holding the seven. West, who had failed to count and was pinched between attempting to guard the spade queen and hold the club queen, fell for the bait and threw the club. Declarer cashed the ace, king of spades and took the last trick with the seven of clubs.

Charles L. Marlow, General Superintendent of The Hecht Co., has been associated with the firm for 40 years.

'Leaders of Modern Business

Says Charles L. Marlow,

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT OF THE HECHT CO.

America as a land of opportunity isn't merely a phrase from copy books . . . nor does it apply only to visitors from across the sea. In any biography of big business, the pages are studded with the names of American boys who have risen from the ranks to become titans of industry.

This recognition of "talent from within" has been an equally potent factor in the development and growth of The Hecht Co. As employee of more than 40 years, I can now sit at executive meetings and see a goodly number whom I knew as mere striplings . . . lads with plenty of get-up-and-go, eager to prove their merit.

A man who grows WITH a business instinctively feels himself a part of that business. To his native intelligence and ability is added an indefinable something that colors all that he thinks and does for that business. It is like that "priceless ingredient" of which we read. It motivates him from day to day and provides an extra fund of energy that cannot help but bring about success in his chosen field. There is no doubt but what this factor is largely responsible for the growth of The Hecht Co. to its present place in the community life of Washington. It is undeniably evidenced in the plans for the coming 45th Anniversary which will be announced in the newspapers very soon.
